WILL YOU HELP?

We ask the co-operation of all telephone users in Metropolitan Boston in putting into effect today (Monday, April 16) the use of the prefixed zeros, as shown in listings in the Boston telephone directory.

It will be extremely helpful to operators if patrons passing calls for numbers will give them exactly as they are printed in the directory. For example, a call for Malden 0068-W should be spoken as "Malden Oh, Oh, six, eight-W" and not as "Malden 68-W."

Co-operation in this respect will enable us to handle calls more quickly and more accurately. We ask it, therefore, in the interest of good service to all.

Our reasons for this request are:

In a few weeks the Aspinwall machine switching central office will be opened in Brookline.

The machine switching apparatus is so designed that it will operate properly only with a four digit number.

It will be necessary, therefore, for all operators calling in to Aspinwall to call four digits and for all Aspinwall subscribers then to use four figures in dialing calls to any telephone listed in the Boston telephone book.

The use of the prefixed zeros is established at this time in all central offices in this area in order that the method of calling may be uniform and as one of the necessary steps in the gradual extension of machine switching operating to other exchanges.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 16.—Rev. Fr. Charles Dillon, confessed slayer of Rev. Fr. Henry O'Neil, today was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor.

The accused man pleaded guilty when arraigned in Circuit Court on the charge of killing the pastor of St. Augustine's Catholic Church last Thursday night.

The sentence followed a plea of guilty entered by Father Dillon over the objections of his counsel who advised the court he had ineffectually tried to persuade the priest to enter a defence of temporary insanity.

"He does not intelligently know what he is doing." Attorney W. L. Fitzgerald informed the court. Father Dillon persisted, however, and after a conference in the judge's chamber was brought back into court and sentenced.

25 GIRLS FLEE BACK BAY FIRE

Panic-Stricken When Flames Sweep Newbury Street Gown and Hat Shop

Twenty-five girls, employes of William C. Keen, gown and hat manufacturer, were driven to the street today by fire in the factory and salesroom at No. 37 Newbury street.

The fire started in a closet on the second floor where the girls were working, and in spite of the efforts of Chester Bailey, in charge of the room, to calm them, they packed through the exits in a wild rush. No one was injured.

Protective Wagon No. 2 and the Consolidated Gas Company emergency truck collided on the way to the fire at Stuart and Berkeley streets when one of them skidded. They were able to continue on their way after slight repairs.

The fire did $1,000 damage to the building and probably a much greater damage to expensive gowns and wraps damaged by smoke and water.

Among the girls who fled the fire were Bessie Walton, Eva Johnson, Lucy Johnson and Ruth Nason.

SEIZED ALCOHOL IS ORDERED RETURNED

Approximately 3,000 gallons of denatured alcohol, seized by prohibition agents on February 9 was ordered returned to the original owners today by Judge Brewster in United States District Court. The Court ruled the seizure was illegal. The alcohol, owned by the Alcohol Fuel and Molasses Company, Inc., of New York, was taken from a New Haven freight car in the Boston yards. It was consigned to the Silver Extract Company of Boston.

SEALERS' GOOD WORK ON COAL GETS RAISE

As a reward for the good work performed by the deputy sealers of weights and measures during the recent coal shortage, Mayor Curley today set the maximum of their yearly wages at $2,000 a year instead of $1,900. Twelve deputies will be effected by the order, which will not take effect, however, until next year.

BANKER SENTENCED FOR 3 AUTO DEATHS

Philadelphia, April 16.—Henry G. Brock, banker and clubman, was today sentenced to from six to ten years in the Eastern State Penitentiary for killing three persons with his automobile on March 2. Brock pleaded guilty to the general charge of murder after first pleading guilty to murder in the second degree. The court refused to accept the first plea, stating that the defendant could not fix the degree.

Counsel then changed the plea to guilty of murder, and the court proceeded to hear testimony to determine the degree.

JAIL EX-GOVERNOR FOR CONTEMPT

Oxford, Miss., April 16.—Theodore G. Bilbo, former Governor of Mississippo, was sent to the Lafayette County Jail today to serve a sentence of 30 days for contempt of Federal Court. He failed to appear as a witness in the trial of a suit last December brought by Mrs. Francis Birkhead against Governor Lee M. Russell. The Governor won the suit.

SCHOELKOPF GEMS FINANCED ESCAPE

New York, April 16.—By selling part of the $300,000 worth of jewels stolen from Mrs. C. P. Hugo Schoelkopf last New Year's Eve members of the underworld financed the spectacular escape of four criminals at Matteawan Insane Hospital last week, the police disclosed today.

Matthew Biddulph, one of the gang alleged to have staged the Schoelkopf robbery, called detectives to his cell at the Tombs, where he awaits sentence, to tell all about it, the police said.

Marquis Curtis was one of the quartet of Matteawan inmates who overpowered several guards and kidnaped three of them, to be recaptured in Connecticut after a battle in which two of the fugitives were shot.

According to Biddulph, when Curtis was arrested and threatened with being sent to Sing Sing for life as an habitual criminal, Moran informed Biddulph and the other participants in the robbery that they would have to give a percentage of their share of the loot to finance Curtis' rescue.

GIVES HER DAY TO RAISE $300 FINE

Mrs. Josephine Sullivan of No. 42 Vineland street, Brighton, told Judge Connelley in Brighton court today that if he would give her till tomorrow she could pay a $300 fine imposed for larceny. The judge concurred and she left on treasure bent.

According to the evidence Mrs Sullivan visited the home of Norinne Dalzell, a neighbor, and after her departure two diamond rings valued at $235 and a pocketbook were missing. The police say they subsequently found the pocketbook containing receipted bills belonging to the complainant and also one of her rings, worth $60.

Mrs. Sullivan, who denied the larceny charge, already has spent a week in Charles street jail pending hearing of her case. She now is free on her own recognizance.

HOLD DEATH DRIVER FOR MURDER

Pittsfield Autoist Who Killed Two Is Jailed Without Bail

Pittsfield, April 16.—Fred Miller, forty years old, of No. 148 Jones avenue, was arrested today for the killing of two persons and the injuring of three in a motor crash last night, two miles out on State road.

The charge against him is murder. His case was continued for one week and he was held without bail.

Ruth Jasson, three-year-old daughter of one of the victims, carried away on the running board of the death car, was found in Miller's home.

Police say he has confessed.

He is accused of driving into a group waiting for a car and then with speeding on.

ARRESTED BEFORE.

He was arrested once before for operating under the influence of liquor, police say.

The crash occurred two miles west of here late Sunday night. All night searching parties combed the district from here to the New York line seeking the death car and trace of little Ruth.

The child was torn from her mother's arms and borne away on the running board of the fleeing automobile.

Today police learned of a child

SLAYER IS DOOMED BY COURT

Full Bench Dismisses Bill of Exceptions; New Trial Only Hope Now Left

The full bench of the Supreme Court today denied the bill of exceptions filed by counsel for Paul Pappas, convicted slayer of Alice Arsenault and under sentence to die May 1. This ruling dooms Pappas unless his counsel can get a new trial.

The full bench ruled there was no error in the trial or in the subsequent sentences by Judge Keating.

Pappas

After the ruling James Kenney, Pappas' counsel, said he would file a motion for a new trial.

A similar motion will by made during the week by Attorney John W. Schenck, who has acted as Pappas' attorney ever since the trial.

It is not known whether the two attorneys will act in concert. Schenck claims also to have unearthed new evidence.

Judge Braley of the Superior Court, who heard the motion for a bill of exceptions some time ago, declined the responsibility of a ruling and referred the case to the full bench.

This action was taken on the afternoon of the day when Pappas was to have been electrocuted.

Everything was in readiness for the execution when the court hearing took place. After his ruling.

answering the description of the missing youngster being at the Miller home. They investigated. Her presence was considered sufficient proof but further evidence was found in the battered hood, shattered headlights and twisted fenders of the touring car in a garage.

When officers led Miller before the machine and then stood the girl along side, he is said to have con- [illegible] L. [illegible] of Police John Sul- [illegible] hine had not been workin[illegible] and that he lost control just a few feet before he came upon the waiting group. He claimed his vision had been blurred because of the dampness.

The police say Miller's right name is Mallimansey and that he came to Pittsfield from Lithuania about twelve years ago. He is a moulder at the General Electric plant.

The authorities further charge that about two years ago he was arrested for operating under the influence of liquor and his license was suspended.

Miller denied today he had been drinking yesterday.

The five victims were waiting for a street car near the Tillotson mill, two miles west of here. Heavy fog and a drizzling rain prevented them from seeing the automobile until it was too late to jump.

The dead:

John P. Jasson, 32 years old, No. 235 Francis street.

Miss Mildred F. Holt, 23 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Holt, No. 40 South Onota street.

The injured:

Donald Reed, 16 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Reed, No. 794 Housatonic street, probably fatally injured, is at the House of Mercy Hospital.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jasson, 30 years old, mother of the child and widow of John P. Jasson, wounds, shock, hysteria, is at the Hillcrest Hospital.

According to Emil S. Schaffo, operator of the street car which had just come to a stop to take on passengers, and who witnessed the accident, the death car was speeding west on the road, where the group awaited the car. All five persons, he said, were carried along by the automobile for at least thirty feet, and thrown against the standing street car.

Jasson was killed instantly. Miss Holt died a quarter of an hour after arriving at a hospital. Reed is momentarily expected to die. Mrs. Jasson is expected to recover.

A general police alarm had been sent out within ten minutes after the accident, and every town between here and Albany was on the alert. All west-bound automobiles were stopped and the occupants questioned.

Miss Holt was prominent in church work here, and was popular among the younger set. She was employed as a stenographer by the General Electric Company. Jasson was also an employe of the General Electric Company.

London — Former Crown Prince Frederick of Germany is suffering from a progressive form of insanity, according to a Wieringen dispatch.

SACCO INSANE, SAYS MOORE

Nicola Sacco.

Attorney Fred A. Moore said the convicted man was insane. He made this statement when asked to take the witness stand by Attorney William G. Thompson, like Moore one of the defence counsel.

This assertion came after a lengthy examination of Dr. Machie Campbell of Boston Psychopathic Hospital as to two contradictory reports he had submitted to court on the question of Sacco's sanity.

GRILLS AILMENT.

Attorney Thompson asked a hypothetical question of great length which was based on statements made previously by Dr. Campbell. This was in substance:

"If these delusions of Sacco that his food was being poisoned and that the jail authorities were trying to keep him awake had developed in three months after his imprisonment, can you say whether he was insane at the time of the trial?"

The witness flushed with evident embarrassment. District Attorney Williams leaped to his feet with an objection. The court sustained him.

"All right, your honor," replied Thompson, "I will attempt to lay a foundation for that question through the introduction of new evidence."

Walking to where Attorney Moore, Jeremiah and Thomas J. McAnarney were sitting with Arthur D. Hill, he said: "Any one of you please take the stand."

IN OCTOBER, 1920.

Thompson: "Mr. Moore, please tell of the delusions Sacco suffered before his trial."

Attorney Moore: "To the best of my recollection it was in October of 1920 when Sacco began complaining as to his food. He kept saying the jail officials were administering poison in his food. Everything possible was done to dissuade him of this idea, but then he would complain again in a few days.

"In December of 1920 he began complaining of the cell over his head by saying the jail authorities had put someone there with a machine to make a grinding noise and so stop his sleep.

"During the trial his complaints became acute. We had his food analyzed and, of course, found no trace of poison. During the trial we had great difficulty in getting him to concentrate on details. He apparently didn't realize the importance of the situation.

"In November, 1921, I had Dr. A. deAnezaga examine Sacco and he declared that he was suffering from some form of insanity, presumably paranoia. He was not a mental expert."

Judge Thayer then started the examination of Dr. Campbell. He asked: "Do you think there is any reasonable possibility of Sacco making his escape from an insane hospital." A.—I think he will plan his escape and do his best to escape.

Q.—Do you think he should be carefully guarded at any hospital for insane? A.—I think so.

The alienist was questioned at considerable length as to two contradictory reports he had submitted as to Sacco's sanity.

The first declared the accused murderer mentally normal and contained the statement that there was "no evidence of insanity of any kind." This was written March 22, the day after Sacco had attempted to dash out his brains against a chair.

The second, signed by four concurring alienists, dated April 5, declared him of "unsound mind and requiring hospital treatment."

This second report was signed by Dr. Abraham Myerson, Dr. James C. Mays, Dr. John Cahoon and Dr. Albert C. Thomas.

After Judge Thayer had read both reports Dr. Campbell was called to the witness stand and questioned at length.

RUBBER STS. IN BOSTON, MAYBE

Rubber pavements for Boston streets may become a reality in the near future. Chairman John H. L. Noyes of the Street Commissioners has written letters to public works commissioners of London and Paris to get their opinion on the question of rubber pavements.

Mr. Noyes understands that the first rubber paved street in London was built at Highgate in 1879 and that it is in excellent condition today, never needing repair.

If London reports are favorable, it is practically assured that the first street paved with rubber will be in the vicinity of the City Hospital on Harrison avenue, South End.

AUTO HITS 'L' POST, GIRL BADLY CUT

Leo Concannon, nineteen year old, of No. 21 Milton street, Dorchester, and Miss Eleanor Sullivan, twelve years old, of No. 36 Greenwich street, Dorchester, are at the Haymarket Relief Hospital suffering from serious injuries about the head and face, because an auto in which they were riding crashed into a post of the Boston Elevated Railway near Walker street, Charlestown, this afternoon.

The injured couple were riding in the car owned and operated by George Pfaiffer, of Roanoke avenue, Jamaica Plain.

The car tipped over after the crash and the occupants were thrown to the street. The Sullivan girl had four stitches taken in her head. Pfaiffer was uninjured. The car was demolished.

room was present when the assistant pastor of St. Augustine's appeared. He accepted the sentence of the court with seeming indifference.

Turning to members of his former congregation in the courtroom, he bade them a casual "goodbye" and turning to the sheriff, declared: "I am ready to go."

PAPPAS' PLEA DENIED BY COURT

Judge Braley announced that he was powerless to stay the execution.

It was necessary, therefore, for Governor Cox to call an extraordinary session of his executive council. The councillors were summoned by telegraph from all over the State. It was 7 p. m. before a majority could be assembled, and it was only four hours before the date set for his electrocution that Pappas was assured he would have a reprieve.

Judge Braley gave Pappas until May 2 in which to take any further legal steps and this was concurred in by Governor Cox.

The motion for a new trial, Kenney announced, will be based on new evidence which the attorney claims will absolutely set aside the testimony of certain witnesses used by the State.

Chief Justice Rugg, who wrote today's opinion, says, in part: "The contention of the plaintiff in error is that 'may' in the statute is used in a mandatory sense and there must, therefore, be a delay of a year before executing sentence in order that the possibility of a motion for a new trial may be given effect. That contention cannot be supported. The word 'may' in the statutes commonly is employed in a permissive and not an imperative sense."

Seek Court Aid to Prevent Lynn Strike

INJUNCTION ASKED BY UNION

Ask Order to Restrain Members of Allied Shoe Workers From Walking Out

A petition for an injunction restraining 1,200 members of the Allied Shoe Workers' Union of Lynn from striking for a 30 per cent. increase in wages was filed in Superior Court, Boston, today.

The motion was entered by Frederick W. Mansfield, counsel for the United Shoe Workers of America.

Between 7,000 and 10,000 other workers besides the Allied group and forty of the principal factories in the city are affected. The manufacturers are planning a shut down.

The injunction motion is directed against John H. Gilbo, Benjamin Gautreau, Wendell E. Dunbar, Michael T. Berry, John L. Burke, Wilbur H. Peabody, Joseph Haggerty, Robert Haggerty, James P. Coleman and Michael J. McGurty.

Attorney Mansfield charges conspiracy by leaders of the Allied Shoe Workers and Amalgamated Shoe Workers of America. The walkout came after weeks of strife. The 1,200 strikers are edge makers, heel workers and Goodyear welt operators.

The Allied Workers are sufficiently powerful to halt production to such extent that the manufacturers will make no attempt to run until the strike is settled, it was said this afternoon by two leaders of the Employers' Association.

The strike today marks a climax in the shoe industry in Lynn and may lead to the driving of two or more factories from that city, according to reports.

The manufacturers met this afternoon and discussed the bringing of a suit, but decided to wait when informed that the United Shoe Workers had taken this step.

There was a mass meeting of strikers, said to have been attended by about 1,200 workers.

12,000 Shoe Workers Plan Amalgamation

Haverhill, April 16.—The United Shoe Workers of America, with members in Lynn, Boston and Manchester, N. H., numbering about 12,000 workers, through their general officials, have asked a conference with representatives of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, this city, on the subject of amalgamating with the Haverhill organization. A communication from General Secretary Thomas F. Lynch, of the United in Lynn, asking for some advances from the Protective Union on the proposed affiliation was submitted to the joint shoe council today. A committee from the council will meet representatives of the United in this city within a few days. The amalgamation would create an organization 35,000 strong.

18 RESCUED IN SNOW STORM

Crew of Tanker Anahuac, Aground Off Biddeford, Saved by Coast Guards

Biddeford, Me., April 16.—Coast guardsmen from the Fletcher's Neck station early today rescued Captain F. E. Stewart of Fall River and his crew of seventeen men from the tanker Anahuac, which grounded near Fortune's Rocks in a blinding snow storm late last night.

The Anahuac was floated today at high water. Coast guardsmen reported that while she was leaking badly she was able to proceed.

She was bound to East Braintree, Mass., from Bangor, where she had discharged 850 barrels of oil.

The thick snow made it impossible to see the lighthouses along the coast, and the tanker's course was being shaped by the compass. Off Fletcher's Neck, she was pointed too far westerly and before the lookouts were aware of danger the craft grounded on a sandy beach after escaping high, rocky bluffs on either side.

The coast guardsmen, three miles away, were unable to see the rockets because of the snow, but finally heard the warning blasts from the Anahuac's whistle. Captain Rollo Morton and his crew then lost no time in getting to the scene with their boat and taking off the crew.

If Mr. Lloyd George accepts, his itinerary is expected to include Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Washington, Pittsburgh and possibly Denver.

COP FIRES SHOTS IN DORCHESTER CHASE

Patrolman Leon M. Randall of the South Boston station, while on his way home today, saw Joseph W. Connors of Clayton street, Dorchester, attempting to break into the residence of Ambrose Riotti at No. 317 Freeport street, Dorchester. The man ran and the patrolman, drawing his gun, fired a number of shots after the man, bringing him to a standstill. In Dorchester court Connors was held in $500.

GUN RUSE FOILS HER 'SUICIDE'

ROSE BERRESI

Rose Berresi, eighteen years old, of No. 68 McKinley street Revere, painted her lips with iodine to resemble acid burns, and ran down Cummings street, screaming she had taken poison and wished to die. Police Lieutenant Tom O'Hara encountered the girl, and drawing his revolver, backed her against a stone wall, with the laconic command: "All right. Say your prayers if you want to die." "But I don't want to die. I've changed my mind. Take that horrid thing away from my face," the girl answered. "I've changed my mind."

HAMMER SLAYER IS LOCATED

Angeles Examiner has located Clara Phillips, notorious escaped hammer murderess, in San Salvador.

Following three and a half months of search through its world-wide representatives, the Examiner, in conjunction with Sheriff Traeger, finally found the slayer of Alberta Meadows in the little country to which she journeyed after a stay of almost two months in Mexico.

The search through all the labyrinths of the world is expected to result immediately in the apprehension of the woman and her return here to serve her life sentence in San Quentin.

San Salvador is just south of Guatemala and on the Pacific side of Honduras.

This dispatch was received from Daniel F. Herandez, director general of police of the Republic of Guatemala:

"Clara Phillips, escaped murderess from California, entered Guatemala at the City of Ayutla on the Mexican-Guatemalan border on March 19, using the alias of Mrs. R. Young and accompanied by Jesse C. Carsen.

"She left Guatemala on April 3 on a steamer bound for San Salvador. But I was only able to prove these facts after three weeks of intensive investigation throughout my country, as a result of information given me by Universal Service and the Los Angeles Examiner and co-operation of Sheriff Traeger."

It was through the conviction that Clara Phillips would need money and by watching the sources of her funds that the hammer murderess was located.

When she escaped from the county jail on December 5 last, she was known to be practically penniless. To watch where her relations got their money, or where it was sent was a task mapped out which has resulted in tracing her to San Salvador.

Such information as was received pointed to Clara Phillips' departure from Los Angeles to Mexicali via aeroplane. A commercial aviator even bragged among his flying friends that he had taken her there.

DEMAND RUSSIA BE OSTRACIZED

London, April 16. (By the Associated Press.)—The Soviet government has not been invited to the renewed Near East conference at Lausanne, it was confirmed today in the House of Commons by Ronald McNeill, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Paris, April 16.—A call upon the nations of the world to break all relations with the Soviet government of Russia was issued today by the Russian National Committee here and signed by A. Kartachoff, Michael Fedoroff and Jules Semenoff, in connection with the forthcoming trial of Archbishop Tikhon, former patriarch of the Russian Orthodox Church.

The breaking of relations, the committee says, would hasten the fall of the Communists by depriving them of all hope of financial assistance.

PROTESTS REMOVING GEN. JACKSON STATUE

Washington, April 16.—Suggestions that the statue of Andrew Jackson, opposite the White House, should be removed because it is not artistic, have been taken up by Senator McKellar of Tennessee in a letter to President Harding urging that the executive not give his approval to such a proposal.

DISTANCE DANCE IN SUBURBS

Promoters of Event Plan to Avoid Mayor's Edict by Staging Match Out of Town

The marathon dance will go on.

Though Mayor Curley issued official edict that there should be no long distance dancing in Boston, the contest will go ahead.

It will be held outside the city where Curley has no jurisdiction. It may be held in Salem or, then again, in any of a score of places offered to the promoter, William H. O'Brien.

When the Mayor heard that O'Brien was going to stage a fancy step Marathon at No. 295 Huntington avenue he said "nothing doing." I will revoke the license of any dance hall where such a contest is staged."

Mr. O'Brien and Edward Curran, machinery inventor who was going out to smash the terpsichorean long distance records, then decided on discretion.

"We do not want to do anything in opposition to the wishes of Mayor Curley," said S. M. Hollingsworth, representing them both. "However, Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Curran feel that a distance dancing contest is no worse than any other endurance contest.

"There are many places available for this contest. It's going to take place, undoubtedly."

Police Chase Dancers Jazzing on Motor Truck

New York, April 16.—Four teams of marathon dancers who changed their base of operations from a Broadway jazz palace to a Fort Lee, N. J., dance hall yesterday on account of police interference, were still gliding over the floor today, intent on establishing a new world's endurance record. They started Saturday night at 7:30 o'clock and at 11 a. m. today there were no signs of quitting.

When the police stepped in at the Broadway hall yesterday afternoon the management promptly engaged a large automobile moving van to transport the dancers over the Hudson to Fort Lee. The dancers waltzed up an incline to the truck and fox-trotted all the way to New Jersey to the strains of phonographic music. The Fort Lee police notified the manager of the Pekin Cellar dance hall that the race was about to be stopped again. The manager ordered out a van and the canned music, and waited for the law to show up. Meanwhile the dance continued.

Another dance floor has been booked somewhere in New Jersey, where the contest will be continued until the 100-hour goal of the participants is attained, or they drop in the attempt, the conductor announced.

Chicago to Let Them "Dance Selves to Death"

Chicago, April 16.—Long distance, marathon, or endurance dancers may dance here until they drop without interference from the police. Commenting on the announcement of a championship contest for Chicago, April 24, Herman Bundesen, Health Commissioner, said:

"Chicago health authorities will not interfere with anyone who wishes to dance himself to death."

Marathon dancing spreading over the United States as fast as influenza ever did, promised today to develop into the national sport of the American women.

Thus far one man has gone insane, another was threatened with permanent lameness, a third, who was going to show what his sex could do

"LIFER" BARR PROVED HERO IN RESCUING PRISON GUARD

SAVED OFFICER ATTACKED BY RAVING MANIAC

By HAROLD R. HALL.

James Barr, serving a life sentence in State Prison at Charlestown for a social crime committed twenty-three years ago, and described by his divorced wife and children as a man so dangerous they fear to have him paroled, saved the life of one of his prison guards at the risk of his own.

George H. Godbeer, editor and publisher of the Fitchburg Sentinel, who is throwing all of his political power against Barr, has not published in his paper the story of Barr's bravery.

It was some twelve years ago that Barr was taken to the State Farm at Bridgewater for observation for several months.

While there Barr one day came upon a keeper and a huge insane prisoner engaged in a bitter fight. They were in one of the washrooms at the time were alone. The [illegible] who had become a raving [illegible], had overpowered the at[illegible] when Barr arrived on the [illegible]. He was forcing the attendant into a corner and was threatening him with a razor.

Barr, serving a life sentence, rushed to the assistance of the attendant and attacked the maniac with his bare hands. The maniac turned on Barr and the attendant was enabled to grab the maniac from behind and overpower him.

Sixty thousand Scots are asking today if the will of the Fitchburg editor and his political friends, who are leading the Barr family fight against the old man, is to be the will of the Commonwealth.

Sixty thousand Scots are asking if the opinion of the chief of police of Fitchburg, a town infested with bootleggers, who are escaping the clutches of the law, is to have any weight in this fight to free a man who offered his life to save the life of one of his keepers.

CITY FULL OF BAD RUM.

"Why doesn't Chief Godley devote his time to ridding this city of the bootlegging element instead of journeying down to Charlestown to keep a poor old man in prison?" is the question that one of Fitchburg's most influential citizens asked when talking with the writer.

One man has died fighting for Barr's release. For four years he fought untiringly for Barr's freedom. Others have stepped into the breech left by the death of Frank Cowin, former member of the State Legislature, Barr's staunchest friend.

Today Captain William Alfred Porte of No. 132 West Newton street, Boston, sent a letter to the Governor's Council, Lieutenant-Governor Fuller and the State Board of Parole in which he declared that he has taken Frank Cowin's place.

HAS HOME FOR BARR.

Captain Porte has a room prepared for Barr. He will take him into his home if he is released. He will take personal charge of Barr and see that he is started on the right road as soon as he is freed. He will wait with open arms for this broken little old man when he steps forth from the gates of the gloomy old prison at Charlestown and will welcome him to his hearth and home.

Captain Porte is a member of the British Naval and Military Veterans' Association.

TRUCK RUNS AWAY AND HITS STORE

A temperamental auto truck suddenly started today while in front of a restaurant on Bromfield street, and proceeded at high speed into Washington street. Pedestrians ducked the runaway truck as it crashed onto the sidewalk and into the plate glass window of the Boston Tailoring Company at No. 371 Washington street.

The window and several suits of clothing were severely—probably fatally—injured. Edward Drunet of No. 11 Moreland street, Roxbury, who drives the truck for the Boston Baked Beans Company, appeared on the scene a few minutes later. He was unable to explain how his truck got the sudden wanderlust.

NEW LYNN STORE ATTRACTS CROWDS

With a profusion of decorations, including flowers massed in display windows, tributes from friends and business acquaintances, the new Lynn store of the Henry W. Berry Co. was opened to the public on Saturday.

It is the fifth in a chain of up-to-date furniture stores conducted by the company under direction of Nathan Saltman, general manager, and occupies a four-story building on Market and Munroe streets, with show windows on each.

The formal opening attracted crowds that filled the floors afternoon and evening and was preceded the day before by a reception to friends and business associates, followed by a complimentary dinner at the Relay House, Nahant, with Mayor MacPhetres as guest.

The four other stores conducted by the company are in Cambridge, Malden, Somerville and Waltham.

2 INJURED BY AUTO AT ORIENT HEIGHTS

Rosario Treskata, forty-three years old, of No. 1207 Bennington street, East Boston, and Ralph De Leo, forty-seven, of No. 37 Leyden street, East Boston, are under treatment at Relief Hospital for injuries suffered when struck by an automobiles on the Walley street bridge, Orient Heights. The machine was driven by James H. Aykroyd of Eliot road, Revere. He will be summoned into court to answer charges of driving without license and registration.

Dayton, O., April 16.—Lieutenants John A. Macready and Oakley G. Kelly took the air in the monoplane T-2 today, with Lieutenant Kelly at the wheel, in what they hope will be a new record for sustained flight. Lieutenants Macready and Kelly now hold the unofficial record for sustained flight, 5 hours and 18 minutes, made at San Diego, Cal., last October.

Washington, April 16.—Smoking is on the increase in the United States, according to figures announced by the Department of Commerce today.

There was a jump of 156 per cent. in the value of cigars and cigarettes from 1914 to 1921, and of this 4 per cent. was from 1919 to 1921. The value in 1914 was $314,884,000; 1919, $778,662,000, and 1921, $806,749,000.

when it concentrates, changed his mind and collapsed.

Meanwhile girl enthusiasts dance merrily on, wearing out shoes, partners and orchestras.

Health authorities, mindful of the way saxophone players are keeling over with exhaustion for the future race, issued frightened warnings.

Five couples one-stepped onto a truck in New York, were ferried over to Jersey, out of the jurisdiction of their own State, and are still at it.

California is arranging the biggest marathon yet, while the rest of the West Coast threatens to bar such exhibitions.

Miss Magdalena Williams of Houston, Texas, today had two blistered feet, the record of sixty-five hours and fifty-three minutes and plenty of worn-out competitors to her credit.

In Cleveland Russell Brady, who set out to establish the supremacy of the male on the dance floor was forced to quit today after thirty-four hours and thirty-eight minutes. A physician told him if he continued longer, he would probably be permanently lame.

Miss Madaline Gottschick of the same city, who started at 3 P. M. Saturday, was still going today after forty-two hours, while a number of others, with less hours to their credit, were still in the contest. There was no police interference here.

Mayor Orders Police Tab on Dance Hall Closings

Mayor Curley today instructed John M. Casey, chief of the licensing bureau at City Hall, to notify the police department to report to him any violation of the regulations of any dance hall in the city in keeping open after 2 a. m. The Mayor says if any one violates this order the license of the hall will be revoked.

Thus the Mayor officially puts a damper on all attempts to start Marathon dances such as have been sweeping the country.

MOVE TO STRIKE FOR 48 HOURS AT AMOSKEAG

By CHARLES O. POWER

Manchester, N. H., textile workers are ready to strike for more pay, the 48-hour week and the preservation of their local unions whenever the national officers of the United Textile Workers of America say the word.

That is the message their delegates brought to the Boston meeting of the New England Conference Board. The Amoskeag Company is union baiting again, they said, and they will not stand for it.

James W. Starr

Fall River delegates reported that their unions feel the same way about conditions in that city. Through resolutions they have told the national organization so. They enjoy the forty-eight-hour week, but will strike at the drop of the hat for what they consider full restoration of wages. They are accepting the recent 12½ per cent. increase under protest. The board indorsed their attitude.

Lusty wallops were taken at two men who have been prominent in labor and politics in Fall River and New Bedford, members of the Legislature and now hold places on State boards. It was voted to ask the Governor not to reappoint "Joe" Parks of the Industrial Accident Board and "Sam" Ross of a minor State board.

10 JAP CHILDREN PERISH IN FIRE

Sacramento, Cal., April 16 (By International News Service). — Ten Japanese children are known to be dead and the ruins of a mission school are being searched for additional bodies following a fire which swept the frame structure today.

Bodies of four children were found on the second floor and six on the third.

The fire was marked by acts of heroism as instructors sought to save their little charges, who numbered about twenty-five.

Three Life Prisoners Are Confirmed by Bishop Slattery

Three young lifers, all serving sentences for murder in the State prison at Charlestown, were confirmed in the Episcopal faith by Bishop Charles L. Slattery of the Episcopal Church at a service in the prison chapel.

The occasion was an intensely dramatic one as well as unusual in the prison routine. The families of two of the prisoners were seated in the gallery during the service. About 150 fellow prisoners attended.

PALS MISSING AT FUNERAL OF RUM-RUNNER

In Cambridge last week a rum-runner was buried. Services at one of the local churches was attended by 1,500 people, many of them city officials. A line of forty automobiles followed the hearse to the cemetary. Two cars were piled high with flowers.

Eight other of the ten who were drowned when the rum ship John Dwight sank in Vineyard Sound. They were not buried as spectacularly as this one, but they all got decent burials.

The tenth, James Cronin, was buried in a Cambridge cemetery. No church services were held. No prayer was offered. Nobody went to the funeral. The coffin containing his body was just taken out and dropped into a hole.

It is rumored that Cronin is not the real name of the man. He is said to have belonged to a good family, and used the fictitious name to protect his folks.

STATE FIGHTS EFFORTS OF WARD'S COUNSEL TO STOP MURDER PROBE

LEGAL BATTLE OVER SLAYING OF HAVERHILL YOUTH

Albany, April 16 (By International News Service).—Deputy Attorney-General Wilbur W. Chambers today submitted to former Justice Isaac N. Mills and State Senator Rabenold, chief counsel for Walter S. Ward, the answer and affidavits which the State will file Wednesday with Supreme Court Justice Staley in the action brought by Ward to restrain Attorney-General Sherman from further investigating the murder of Clarence Peters.

On Wednesday both sides will submit final briefs to Justice Staley and a decision is expected by Friday at the latest.

Counsel for Ward not only asked for an injunction to restrain the Attorney-General from offering the Ward cable messages in evidence, but have questioned the constitutionality of the Peace and Safety Act under which the Attorney-General is conducting the investigation.

Deputy Attorney-General Chambers said today he would contend that Justice Staley's court has no right to interfere with the investigation being conducted by the Attorney-General.

"We further contend," said Chambers, "that Ward admitted the slaying and that one of the reasons reported was blackmail.

"Our investigation leads us to believe that the blackmail had something to do with the shooting and we are trying to obtain cablegrams which we believe will show that Walter Ward, his father, George S. Ward and his brother, Ralph D. Ward, knew of the blackmail before the death of Peters," State counsel argues.

Auckland B. Cordner of New Rochelle, foreman of the grand jury which last May indicted Ward, was called as a witness today by Attorney-General Sherman.

Cordner denied he was a candidate for Police Commissioner of New Rochelle at the time Ward was appointed to that office. Last week Mayor Harry Scott testified that after the Peters murder, Allen R. Campbell of counsel for Ward, asked him if Cordner still wanted to be a Police Commissioner.

"Did Mayor Scott or anyone representing him, or anyone representing Ward, speak to you while you were foreman of the grand jury about the Police Commissionership?" Cordner was asked.

"Nor sir, they did not," he answered.

They are imitations that trade on first appearances. The plating soon wears off and rust consumes the base metal.

N. E. SHIP SLIGHTLY DAMAGED IN CRASH

Norfolk, Va., April 16.—The steamer Penobscot and the schooner Dustin G. Cressy, in collision off Assateague last night, were proceeding today only slightly damaged, according to a radio message picked up at the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station.

First reports of the accident caused the dispatch of the coast guard cutter Manning and lifeboats from several lifesaving stations. The Penobscot is bound from Norfolk to New England.

HAIL NEW VENUS AS A PERFECT 'THIRTY-FOUR'

New York, April 16.—Miss Martha Gonzales, born and brought up in New York, and a startling departure from the classic lines of the hitherto unchallenged "perfect 36," has been named by J. R. Bolton as the logical successor to that stony-hearted girl from Milo, Italy—Venus by name. Mr. Bolton is getting up the Masonic fashion and home exposition to be held in Madison Square Garden the middle of May.

Now Miss Gonzales is the perfect 1923 figure. She's a perfect 34, both bust and hips, and her waist is only 22 inches around. Instead of Venus' 140 pounds she weighs 110 and is 5 feet 7, three inches taller than Venus. As has been noticed, this year's body tends more toward the speedster type.

Miss Gonzales has other dimensions—thigh, 20 inches; ankle, 8 inches; wrist, 6 inches.

HUB PAIR DEFAULTED IN TAILOR SHOP THEFT

Marlboro, April 16—Louis E. Feldman of No. 12 Buckminster street, Boston, and Miss Augusta Rosenberg of Saratoga street, East Boston, were defaulted in Marlboro court today when they failed to appear on a charge of larceny of two suits of clothes from a Marlboro tailor. A Woburn tailor was present to identify them as having stolen six suits of clothes from him. Feldman is alleged to have packed the clothes in a suitcase while Miss Rosenberg was having her coat mended.

CHIROPRACTOR HELD ON STATE CHARGE

Marlboro, April 16.—Murrell B. Dulysle of No. 79 East Lincoln street was arraigned in district court today charged with illegal practice of medicine. He was arrested on the complaint of Arthur Keating of the State Board of ARegistration. The case was continued to May 2. Dulysle is a chiropractor, with an office at No. 198 Main street, and claims to be a graduate of the Palmer School of Chiropractice at Davenport, Ia.

3 HURT IN CRASH IN DORCHESTER

Joseph Obamica, of Third street, Chelsea, while operating a touring car on Columbia road, near Devon street, collided with the machine of Samuel Jacks, of No. 1339 Blue Hill avenue, containing his two children, Samuel M. and Eunice. All three were cut by flying glass and were treated at the home of a nearby physician. Obamica was uninjured.

ABANDONED RUM SHIP SCENE OF MUTINY

New York, April 16.—Mutiny, and not piracy, was the theory advanced today by Federal officials who are seeking to solve the mystery of the abandoned rum-runner Patricia M. Behan, which was picked up at the entrance of Great South Bay by the coast guard cutter Manhattan.

The vessel's sails were set, her anchor was dragging and there was no sign of the crew, which probably numbered ten.

One official expressed the opinion that a mutiny had been carefully staged so that the vessel might later be salvaged.

The abandoned schooner was formerly the Edith Helen Verge, and was built at Sheet Harbor, Halifax County, in 1920.

She is of eighty-nine tons and about 100 feet in length.

Empty rifle cartridges scattered about her deck indicated that a battle had been waged.

In the captain's cabin was found a box containing about a thousand cartridges with indications that some had been removed hurriedly. A gun rack in the master's quarters showed signs of havigg been emptied hurriedly.

A leaf from a note-book found in the cabin recorded sales of 3,918 packages of liquor from January up to March 27, when the entries end with the record, "Five cases of champagne at $60."

There was not a drop of liquor in the hold of the schooner.

MEXICAN BANDITS RELEASE AMERICAN

Mexico City, April 16.—Oliver W. Krull, storekeeper for the American Mining Company at Trinidad, Durango, who was kidnaped more than a week ago by bandits, has been released after the payment of a $5,000 ransom and is on his way home, according to information received at the War Department. The bandits, led by Juan Galindo, have not yet been captured.

Special Election

A special election will be held in Ward 12, Roxbury, tomorrow, to elect a representative to take the place vacant by the death of Thomas N. Joyce. Polls will open at 10 a. m. and close at 8 p. m. Patrick G. Sullivan will be the only candidate.

Brookline High Pupils Told How to Behave

Life for the 1,300 students of the Brookline High School will be decidedly simpler if the authorities are able to put their new strict program into working order.

Dancing will be more sedate; no smoking within a fifteen-minute radius of the building will be allowed; no coquettish ear-rings will dangle from the girls' pink ears and no lip-sticks will be in evidence.

Two meetings were held at which the faculty laid down rules of conduct to the girls and boys. About 500 boys attended one meeting, held in Shaller Hall, at which Coach Carroll, and the principal of the school, Wilfred C. Akers, presided.

Expulsion immediately will follow any infringement of the new smoking rule, the boys were told. No boy will be allowed to smoke within a fifteen-minute radius of the school, between 8 o'clock in the morning and 6 o'clock in the evening.

No swearing will be allowed. The boys must observe a six-inch limit in dancing, and Coach Carroll gave demonstrations of the correct and incorrect way to hold a girl partner in dancing.

Eight hundred girls attended the meeting held in the new auditorium of the school. Miss Mary W. Sawyer, dean of girls, presided and told the girls that members of the faculty had observed a great deal of "indecent dancing" at the noon recess.

She stipulated that girls must keep a four-inch distance between themselves and their partners.

No more earrings may be worn in the classrooms, and any girl appearing in chiffon stockings or satin slippers will be sent home until she wears more appropriate footgear, she decreed.

No girl will be allowed to wear rouge or to use a lipstick, but powder may be applied if it doesn't show.

Thin sweater blouses must be worn with a shortwaist underneath. No ruling was made as to girls smoking at this meeting, although students declare it is a common practice among senior girls to smoke cigarettes behind the school building during recess and noon hour.

The meetings are thought by the students to be an outgrowth of the censor system that has prevailed upon the dance floor. The day before the meeting, students say, a senior girl and boy were asked to leave the floor because of their position.

FORD AGENT AND BANKER HELD IN SHORTAGE

Windsor, Ont., April 16.—Edward J. Colquhoun, manager of the Ford, Ont., branch of the Bank of Montreal, and William E. Discher, purchasing agent of the Ford Motor Company, Limited, of Canada, were to be arraigned here today on a charge of conspiracy to cover a shortage of $30,000 in the Ford Company's accounts with the bank.

The men are at liberty under bonds of $30,000 each.

Investigation of alleged discrepancies in the bank's funds led to the arrests. According to bank officials, an attempt had been made to cover a $30,000 overdraft made by Discher.

Bank officials charge the two men had been speculating on the stock market.

Society Joins in Patriots' Week Events, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

AT eight o'clock tonight the first gun will be fired opening the campaign to raise funds for the Army and Navy Club.

For at eight o'clock the curtain rises upon the benefit performance of "The Fool," with many society folk as well as imposing army and navy officials scheduled to be on hand. This benefit presentation of Channing Pollock's play will usher in the many festivities of Patriots' Week, as it has been called, and each event promises to add not a little to the coffers of the Army and Navy Club.

Mrs. Marland C. Hobbs has marshalled together a group of society girls who will sell flowers at the theatre tonight, all the flowers having been donated, by the way. A host of prominent matrons are listed as patronesses, the latter including Mesdames Charles Almy, John Bartol, Walter C. Baylies, Stoughton Bell, S. Parker Bremer, Arthur Astor Carey, Tucker Daland, Eben S. Draper, William C. Endicott, Jr., J. Malcolm Forbes, Louis A. Frothingham, Allan Forbes and Pierpont L. Stackpole.

Immediately following "The Fool," many members of the audience will make their way to the Army and Navy Club, where a reception will be held, at which Rear Admiral and Mrs. Henry A. Wiley, Major-General and Mrs. Adre W. Brewster, Assistant Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis, Colonel and Mrs. Arthur Marix and His Excellency the Governor and His Honor the Mayor will be present.

Tomorrow finds a number of important events taking place to help the Army and Navy Club. In the morning and afternoon comes the big rummage sale at Unity House under the leadership of Mrs. B. Devereaux, while in the evening there will be two big patriotic bridge parties, one at Mrs. Charles F. Ayer's home at No. 315 Dartmouth street and the other out Cambridge way at Mrs. Wayland Minot's home at No. 56 Garden street, with Mrs. Minot and Mrs. John Perrin (Beatrice Webb) in charge of the latter.

Mrs. John Perrin (Beatrice Webb), one of the smart set's attractive younger matrons, together with Mrs. Wayland Minot is running a patriotic bridge party, taking place tomorrow night in aid of the Army and Navy Club. The affair will be held at Mrs. Minot's home, No. 56 Garden street, Cambridge.

Thursday, Patriots' Day, will find many people availing themselves of the opportunity of inspecting the Longfellow home on Brattle street, Cambridge, which is being opened in aid of the Army and Navy Club. Tickets, for fifty cents each, include not only inspection of this famous house under the guidance of members of the poet's family, but also tea. At the same time a flower, cake and candy sale will be held there, with a group of prominent women in charge. The latter include, among others, Mesdames Francis Stewart Kershaw, Arthur Astor Carey, Theodore Storer, Duncan Dana, Samuel Eliot, A. Lawrence Lowell, Richard H. Dana, John Storer, Robert D. Westeron, Godfrey Cabot and Robert Ward.

Throughout the week various sales and bridge parties will be held in neighboring towns and on Saturday there will be a tag day in Boston, for which Miss Elizabeth Leland of Brookline has made arrangements.

MR. AND MRS. RODMAN PAUL SNELLING with Miss Ella Snelling, Mrs. Edward A. Clark and her daughter, Miss Helen Clark and Mrs. Charles D. Weld have joined the Boston colony at Hot Springs.

Every year at about this time the Snellings pay a visit to the Springs, usually going straight on from there to their Summer place at Beverly Farms.

CRAZED BY LIQUOR, ENDS LIFE WITH RAZOR

Crazed by poisonous liquor, Henry W. Stinke, fifty-nine years old, committed suicide in the bathroom of his home by cutting an artery in his left wrist with a razor.

Stinke lived at No. 549 East First street, South Boston.

He was discovered by his wife on the floor of the bathroom. He was removed to the City Hospital, where he died.

JUGOSLAV CABINET OF PACHITCH QUITS

London, April 16. Parliament has been adjourned.

HITCH IN PLANS TO PAY U. S. FOR RHINE ARMY

Paris, April 16 (By the Associated Press).—The conferees on the plan for meeting the costs of the American Army of Occupation in the Rhineland held another session today and adjourned without reaching a settlement.

The Allied representatives, it was stated, wished to submit to their governments various points in the reply of Secretary of State Hughes to the last Allied proposal. Eliot Wadsworth, the American representative, presented the secretary's reply.

The several objections to the allied offer presented by Mr. Wadsworth seemed so important to the allied negotiators that they were unwilling to assume the responsibility of dealing with them, referring them to their governments.

The settlement of the issue, which had been regarded by the conferees as a foregone conclusion, was said in French quarters today to have become suddenly somewhat uncertain.

Telegraph Briefs

Detroit — Four persons were drowned in an icy creek here when their touring car crashed through a bridge railing, overturning in six feet of water and pinning the occupants beneath the surface. The dead: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schiel, aged about fifty-five; Lester Cherry, twenty-five, and Mrs. Victoria Selwa, fifty-two. Mrs. Dorothy Gordon, twenty-three, the survivor, is in a critical condition.

St. Catherine, Ont.—Seven-year-old Ray Norton is weeping his heart out today, unaware that he had committed murder. His chum, Willie Norton, nine, is dead. They had been playing "Wild West" and Ray ordered Willie to "put up your hands." Willie did not comply. Ray pulled the trigger of a revolver he had found.

SWISS SOCIALISTS BEATEN BY 3 TO 1

Berne, Switzerland, April 16. (By the Associated Press).—The Socialists' proposal for submission of all custom tariff agreements with foreign governments to a national referendum was rejected in yesterday's plebiscite by a three-to-one vote. The measure was defeated in every Canton except Zurich. The result was regarded as a repetition of the Socialist defeat last December, when a proposal for a levy on capital was overwhelmingly turned down.

PROBE GARAGE PERMITS O. K.'D BY CURLEY

The Finance Commission has eben conducting a secret investigation into the matter of the granting of garage permits since Mayor Curley assumed office.

Just what the commission intends as a result of the probe is a mystery.

Secretary John C. Dowling of the commission today refused to say anything about the matter, although he admitted the investigation had been made.

Supposition around City Hall is that the commission is seeking to learn if there is anything smacking of "graft" in the situation.

Sometimes a permit is rejected, and, a little later, granted after another hearing.

The final approval comes from the Mayor. The last permit, one granted in the face of general opposition, was that of James Flannagan in Cleveland Circle, in the exclusive Aberdeen section.

The granting of this permit is said to have been the foundation of the recent clash between Mayor Curley and James J. Phelan.

Chairman J. H. L. Noyes, of the Street Commission, said the books and the records of the Street Department are open to anyone who wishes to investigate.

EMPLOYMENT AND PAY SHOW INCREASE

Washington, April 16.—Preliminary employment figures during March in 5,453 representative establishments of forty-three manufacturing industries show an increase over February of 2.1 per cent. in the number of employes, a 5 per cent. increase in total wages and a 2.8 per cent. increase in the average weekly wage, according to the Bureau of Labor statistics. The greatest increases were shown in the fertilizer, brick, shipbuilding and paper and pulp industries.

PITTSFIELD "SUSPECT" IS RELEASED HERE

The combination of a dented front mud-guard and the surname of Miller almost provided Harry Miller of New York a free trip to Pittsfield today. Traffic Officer Martin Glynn, who does duty at Montford and Beacon streets, saw Miller's car pass with the dent. He at once recalled the Pittsfield accident in which an autoist killed two people and injured three others. He took Miller to Station 16. When it was learned that the man wanted in Pittsfield was also named Miller, it began to look bad for the detained man. Then came word that the Pittsfield police had seized a suspect and Miller was released.

NOW for the First Time LINIT, the Remarkable New Starch Discovery, Is Offered to the Housewife

HAVEN'T you often said to yourself "How I wish the dainty things I am so proud of would always stay as fresh and as beautiful as when they first came from the store?"

For as you know, once they are washed, the garments seem to lose something of the beautiful sheen and finish they had when you first brought them home.

The Real Secret of the Natural Finish

THE secret is very simple, however. It's all in the starch the great fabric manufacturers use. Such a starch is Linit—the modern scientific starch discovery.

Linit gives fine fabrics, shirt waists, shirts and collars that natural finish you admire so much in goods fresh from the store. The reason is that Linit penetrates to the very center of every thread that makes up the fabric.

Preserves the Life of the Fabric and Resists Wear

IT is this quality in Linit that makes fabrics and garments on which you use it remain fresh and clean longer.

Linit is made by an improved process which keeps the starch thin and free-running, and absolutely prevents caking, smearing or sticking to the iron.

It is not necessary to boil Linit. You can prepare it with cold water instantly. Every housewife will appreciate this time-saving and unusual convenience.

Makes Cotton Look and Feel Like Linen

WITH Linit every thread of your garment is "starch-treated." Cotton fabrics look like pure linen—with a soft, cool, pliable finish.

Your fabrics always have the same fashionable, natural finish that they had when you first purchased them.

JUANITA TRIED TO HIDE DOPE HABIT FROM HER MOTHER

PARENT READ SECRET IN EYES OF FILM STAR

By JUANITA HANSEN.

CALIFORNIA! AND MOTHER!

As I told you in an earlier article, I had made up my mind to go home. Two days in New York, after the REDUCTION "CURE" I have described, and I was on a westbound train.

However, it was only with the aid of narcotics that I was able to carry out my plan.

Do you think the drugs were easy to get. Remember, I had lost my drugs purveyor. The doctor would not help me. He really thought I was cured. I didn't dare ask him. I have often wondered if this doctor really believed he cured me.

Unable to Resist

My "cure" was actually a failure!

I needed more than the doctor's word to prove that I was cured. The pains in my limbs and the gnawing pain in my stomach told me another story. My dope need remained.

One false step; and I was right back on the stuff.

Juanita Hansen.

I could not resist the temptation to say good-by to a girl member of the "fraternity" of drug users. She was happy at sight of me. I was so improved. But when I told her of my long journey, and that I seemed to have a continual craving, she said:

"Better take a little stuff. I've got some. It's an awful long trip."

I was not strong enough to resist her friendly proffer. When I boarded the train, I was fortified with a little "bindle" of heroin and a little "bindle" of cocaine! How I enjoyed the journey!

California at last!

My mother and daddy were there to meet me. It was a guilty little girl that embraced her mother so lovingly in the bustling Los Angeles station. Never before in my life had I been so happy to see anyone as I was to see my mother that day.

You readers who are innocent or ignorant of the effect narcotics have on the eyes, countenance and general appearance would never have been able to tell I had gone back to the stuff. But my mother I cannot fool.

Mother Knew Truth

She, too, was very happy to see me. I noticed a very sad look in her eyes. She said nothing—but in her eyes I could read everything. Not even with my mother would I ever discuss the subject of narcotics.

I told you in a previous article that it probably would take several weeks to acquire a real narcotic habit; but this is not true of an addict who has been temporarily "cured." It took me five days to reach California.

FIVE DAYS—ANOTHER HABIT!

Again the devil had pulled me back and once more I was linked to his chain.

At this time I weighed about 115 pounds.

My mother and daddy had just driven down from San Francisco. They were looking for a home. In the meantime I lived at the Alexandria Hotel. As much as I wanted to live with my mother and daddy, I was afraid. I had something to hide. Their temporarily unsuccessful efforts to find a home came almost as a relief to me.

Addicts Seek Solitude

I wanted to be ALONE! A trait you will find in nearly all addicts. It isn't that you're afraid of people—it's just that you don't want to KNOW.

My family did not locate for three months. Then they took a pretty home, a beautiful little bungalow. They asked me to come home and live. Oh, how much I wanted to!

But I didn't dare. Then one day a surprise greeted me when I entered the house. I was told my entire family had discussed me and my secret. Whether I had attempted cures they did not know, but they told me they were going to "take the reins." My mother broke down and cried and pleaded with me:

"My little girl must stop this thing."

It almost broke my heart to hear my mother sob out my secret. I was too bewildered to answer. My mother did not understand then as she does today. She knew about as much about narcotics as I did the first night I went to a "party." She knew absolutely nothing.

Still, it was only natural that she should think I could give up narcotics just for the asking. She did not understand.

Moves Into Home

I moved home that very day. But I had my "bindles" with me. I had no difficulty in finding a new purveyor in Los Angeles.

For three or four days I lived at home. They tried very hard to make me happy. But I was heartbroken. The one I most loved in all the world was with me, but she must never see me take narcotics. And she never has!

All of my intimate family, those who lived in my mother's home were interested in Christian Science. Science was not unknown to me!

In the surroundings of my mother's lovely home, and with all the love she showered on me, I could not refuse to be treated when my mother requested it.

My mother did not act hastily.

Mother Paved Way

For a few days she just sort of paved the way. I can be coaxed into walking many miles, my mother has often said. But I can't be forced a foot. She told me about a practitioner she had been to see. Would I see him that afternoon and tell him everything and let him try to help me?

Of course I would. I would make one more attempt.

It was a very kind, wonderful man who called that afternoon. He was to be my practitioner—the one who patiently watched and worked day and night with me for more than three months.

"Greater love hath no man than that he lay down his life for his friend."

And for three long months, this man, my practitioner, laid down his life for me. I mean by this that he lived so unselfishly with no thought of himself or of his desires or joy—"he laid down his life" that I might live. For, surely, my life for three months was held by a tiny thread.

Surrounded by the love of my people, nurses and practitioner, three months I spent in another attempt to break the chain.

For three months I fought with just my belief in a Supreme Intelligent Mind.

Three Months' Fight

For three months I suffered like my dear friend, Wally Reid. He gave up his life, but I feel he died a victor.

I am alive and I am telling my story, that I might warn you.

That I did not sacrifice life itself I attribute to the faith and love and patience of my Science practioner and nurse. To please my dear mother, I would make another attempt——

With my handbag and a few personal belongings, I entered a very pretty little bungalow that radiated love. It was a little white bungalow, with pleasing green lawn and cute little veranda, on the outskirts of Los Angeles half way to the beach.

I had said good-by to my mother at noon. My practitioner did not wish to have my mother go with me to the "Science Home" as it was called. I was received by such a dear, sweet woman. The atmosphere was adorable. I felt confident that at least I had found the place I had been looking for.

If ever I was to break the Devi' chain here was the place!

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

The next article, No. 12, of Miss Juanita Hansen's series dealing with her addiction and cure of the drug habit will appear exclusively in tomorrow's edition of the Boston American. Back copies containing these articles may be obtained at No. 80 Summer street.

BRITISH HOLD UP U. S. DEBT PACT

Washington, April 16.—The American Debt Funding Commission today authorized Secretary Mellon to sign the war debt funding agreement with Finland.

Washington, April 16.—Concern was manifest at the Treasury today when the American Debt Funding Commission went into session, as to reasons for delay by the British government in returning the debenture constituting the refunding agreement between the United States and England.

Some members of the commission were said to be doubtful as to the immediate conclusion of the negotiations, owing to the difficulties of the British government.

The debenture was sent to London for study of its terms by which the British government binds itself to pay off in sixty-two years the war-time debt of $4,600,000,000. It had been expected the document would be started on its return trip within a fortnight after its arrival in London. Neither the commission nor the treasury has received any communication concerning it.

Referring to the American debt, Mr. Baldwin said he hoped shortly to settle the final form of the bonds to be given in replacement of the demand obligations.

FRANCE DEDICATES "HALLS OF ALLLIES"

Paris, April 16 (By the Associated Press).—An exchange of telegrams between President Harding and President Millerand was a featur today of one of the most moving ceremonies here since the great war, when at the Invalides the new "Halls in Honor of the Allied Armies," especially the American army, were formally thrown open.

President Harding's message was communicated to President Millerand by Ambassador Herrick, who said the givernment and the people of the United States held the sincerest hope of seeing forever preserved the complete and constant friendship which marked the dé'ations of the allied and associated powers during the war, as an everlasting testimony of the true fraternity of nationes and peoples.

VON ROSENBERG BACKS HUGHES' PEACE PLAN

Berlin, April 16. (By the Associated Press).—Foreign Minister Von Rosenberg, addressing the Reichstag today, declared the battle now in progress on the banks of the Rhine and in the Ruhr was not one for coal or wood, but a fight which would determine whether the ideas of right and peace would progress or lose ground.

The Foreign Minister voiced approval of the suggestion of Secretary of State Hughes that the reparation problem be referred to a body of authoritative experts, and also endorsed the conclusions on this subject recorded in the resolution adopted by the International Chamber of Commerce at its recent congress in Rome.

In view of the economic devastation wrought by the invasion of the Ruhr and what he characterized as France's avowed purpose to paralyze German economic productiveness, any attempt at present to appraise Germany's capacity for payment or establish the precise amount would be wholly futile, the Foreign Minister declared.

French and Belgians Seize 9 More Mines

Dusseldorf, April 16 (By the Associated Press).—Nine additional coal mines in the Ruhr have been seized by the French and the Belgians making a total of thirty-one mines and coke plants now in their hands.

There are approximately 260 coal shafts in all the Ruhr. At nine of the works seized today there were about 160,000 tons of fuel, chiefly coke. All of this was confiscated.

The French and the Belgians, it was announced, will begin shipping today an average of 10,000 tons of coal and coke daily to France and Belgium.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT, TWO "DIPS" APPEAL

Inspector Jim Concannon saw a hand slide under a man's coat in the crowd at Washington and Essex streets, so he reached forward and grabbed. Today the men he arrested, Frank J. Neary and Arthur H. Hagan, known to the police as pickpockets, were sentenced to one year in jail as vagabonds. They appealed and were held in bail of $2,000.

1350 PUPILS MARCH OUT AT SCHOOL FIRE

Lawrence, April 16.—Thirteen hundred and fifty pupils of the Central Grammar School filed out of the building today without their wraps in less than a minute when a fire was discovered near the boiler in the basement. The school alarm was rung by Principal Cornelius F. Sullivan, and the pupils responded in perfect order. Damage was slight.

Telegraph Briefs

Mexico City.—Advices from Merida, Yucatan, say only the bodies of three children have been recovered from Lebis Bay where twenty persons were drowned last Wednesday when a motor-driven bark foundered.

SLAYER OF GIRL ENDS HIS LIFE

New York, April 16.—Harold Van Alstein, an acrobat, who last January shot and killed his sweetheart, Miss Marian MacLaren of Philadelphia, a vaudevillian, committed suicide in the Tombs today by strangling himself with his belt.

Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions Friday had sentenced Van Alstein to twenty years to life improsonment after he had pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree. A lunacy commission had declared him sane.

Miss MacLaren was seated in a restaurant January 12 when Van Alstein entered, killed the girl, wounded her brother Hugh, and then shot himself in the chest.

TRY FOSTER'S AID IN "RED" CASE

(By Associated Press)

St. Joseph, Mich., April 16.—Charles E. Ruthenberg, of Cleveland, nationally known Liberal, the second person to face prosecution under Michigan's anti-syndicalism law, was ordered to trial today, a little less than two weeks after a jury failed to convict William Z. Foster, of Chicago, first defendant tried under that law.

Ruthenberg, as was Foster, is charged with assembling with an organization advocating illegal methods for bringing about social and political reform.

Ruthenberg, while on the stand for Foster, testified to his Liberal activities. He said he had been a Socialist organizer for a number of years, had been that party's candidate for Mayor of Cleveland and had run for Congressman and United States senator from Ohio.

$10,000 BAIL OF MORSE IS FORFEITED

Washington, April 16.—Bond for $10,000 furnished by Harry Morse after his indictment with his father, Charles W. Morse, and others on charges of wartime shipping frauds, was ordered forfeited by the District of Columbia Supreme Court today, because of the continued failure of the younger Morse to appear for trial.

At the same time the court issued a bench warrant for young Morse's arrest and court attaches were ordered to serve it at New London, Ct., where his attorneys said he had been detained by illness.

The action was taken after a board of medical examiners, appointed by the court, had reported that his condition did not prevent him coming to Washington.

COAL SHORTAGE BOOMS WATER POWER PLANTS

New Haven, Ct., April 16.—Water power plants are being developed in New England and New York State, as a result of the acuteness of the coal situation, Arthur T. Safford of Lowell, hydraulic engineer, said in a lecture at Yale today.

The production of electricity in New York State has doubled in ten years, while use of coal has increased only fifty per cent, he said. New England has doubled her water power in ten years through construction of hydro station by the Central Maine Power Company, New England Power Company, Turners Falls Power and Electric Company and developments at Lowell, Lawrence, Holyoke and Manchester, N. H.

Mr. Safford said that New England, although alive to the needs of power, has been surpassed by developments at Niagara Falls, on the Mississippi River at Keokuk and on the Pacific coast.

"Prices realized on Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in Boston for week ending Saturday, April 14, on shipments sold out, ranged from 8.75 cents to 14.50 cents per pound and averaged 13.42 cents per pound."—Advt

JUG OF BOOZE FOUND IN SKIRT ON WASH LINE

Lawrence, April 16.—After searching the home of Sophie Sofoloski, No. 488 Common street, for moonshine, a wink from one of the Sofoloski children toward a well-filled clothes line in the yard sent Daniel F. Dwyer, head of the vice squad, investigating.

He found a woman's skirt drying in the sun with a jug of liquor secreted inside. He seized both.

Today when police came for Mrs. Sofoloski, they found she had fled.

Mrs. Sofoloski attracted police attention when a man dashed into the station claiming she had attacked him, and was selling booze. Mrs. Sofoloski declared the man had forced his way into her home and she had ejected him. The raid followed.

Asks Boycott Here to Curb Sugar Gyppers

Hub-Bub
STORIES OF BOSTON TOWN
By Jo Swerling

MOY DOW, WHO IS NOT THE MAYOR OF CHINATOWN. He will discuss rotary clubs but not Confucianism and will sell you anything but atmosphere. Two weeks from today Moy Dow will make a journey—to attend the annual convention of the United Chinese Merchants' Association of America.

THE LATE JOHN CHINAMAN

In front of the Chinese Mission on Oxford street a gray cat lay, dying. Sadly it was viewed by one of Sze-Chuen's seventy million. On the corner, in front of the side of a building which has for years been the unofficial bulletin board of Boston's Chinatown, stood Lee Hong Win of Shantung, Sam Lee Wong of Yunnan, Joe Lop Lee of Kwang-Si and Tom Fuen Yuen of Shen-Si. They jabbered merrily away in dialects that were old centuries before Christ was born.

Across the street, at No. 23, was Soo Hoo Wing. Surely he would know where I could locate Moy Dow. In some heavily scented, smoke-laden haunt concealed behind the deceptive bricks of the drab thoroughfare—perhaps beneath the barred window on the roof of one of the buildings, where stood a Chinese girl, gazing wistfully into the street below. Perhaps at the building of the Chinese Merchants on Tyler street, or over at the Theatre Luck Tin Tao, on Edinboro street (strange rue for a Chinese quarter), or maybe within the barred doors of some tong headquarters. Wherever he was I must seek him out.

For Moy Dow is the King of Chinatown. All the police reporters swear to it.

Hence I was bitterly disappointed when I was told to fare to No. 69 Newbury street, which is just as Oriental in atmosphere as chopped bloaters. There I found Moy Dow, who, it turned out, is president of the Asia Products Corporation and, on the side, major domo of the Lotus tea room, on the window of which is written "A Breath of the Orient." A breath of the Orient it is, and an expensive breath, for a cup of Moy Dow's tea sets you back one occidental iron man. Moy Dow stood in the arch of a gorgeous Chinese altar—framed in the background of the ages. What ancient temple had been despoiled of its holy-of-holies? Moy Dow was vague as to that, but the sacred shrine was for sale. Two thousand Western smackers was the price—take it or leave it.

For Inside Story of Chinatown

I agreed to leave it. After all, I wasn't in the market for shrines, or Mings, or delicate fragments from this or that dynasty. What I wanted was the inside story of Chinatown.

"How long have you been King of Chinatown?" I asked.

"Rats," said Moy Dow blandly. "Who's been slipping you the old bunk? Nobody's King of Chinatown. And nobody's Mayor of Chinatown. It's high time the public got rid of the notion that the Chinese are still the same race of men they were in the days of the Chinese wall.

The inside story of Chinatown, young man, is this—the Chinese clipped off their pigtails years ago, and when they did that they lopped off a lot of other rubbish. Today the Chinese are just as advanced as any other race, and they are in the main nothing more or less than business men. The average Chinaman today finds his greatest interest in business. And it's no longer the chop suey house and the laundry.

"That is why you will find no Chinese poor houses, no Chinese paupers, no Chinese drunkards.

His Own Religion Antedates Christianity

"The missions are moved by kindly impulses, but they have no more effect on Chinese thought than so much wind. The average Chinaman who attends the missions does so to learn the language and to pick up what he can about Americanism in general. He is not interested in the religious phases of the mission at all. His own religion antedates Christianity by some few centuries and if he is religiously inclined at all he is satisfied with that.

"The Chinese Merchants' Association, about which so much fanciful literature has been written, is nothing more or less than a Chamber of Commerce, started by myself twenty years ago in order to further the interests of Chinese enterprise. We have branches in all cities east of Omaha and several thousand members. In two weeks we hold our annual convention in Chicago.

"This unofficial Chinese court you have heard about is nothing more less than a board of arbitration which listens to disputes among local merchants and renders decisions the same as any other board of arbitration. This is not a Chinese custom. It is done to save Chinamen the trouble and expense of litigation. It is one custom that I think the American business men can copy to their advantage.

"I'm sorry to break up some of your delusions. Are you interested in ivory?"

Moy Dow showed me a beautiful bit of ivory carving. The price is $5,000. In despair I went back to Oxford street. Soo Hoo Wing joined the group of Chinese chattering in front of the bulletin board. Perhaps Moy Dow, with the traditional subtlety of his race, had deliberately given me a wrong steer. What were they discussing so animatedly in front of the bulletin? Perhaps a new tong war. Was the notorious hatchet man, known as the Black Devil, in Chinatown again?

I asked Soo Hoo Wing.

"They're talking about the Braves' opening," said Soo Hoo. "They all think that Christy will deliver a World Series team this year. What do you think?"

I couldn't tell him. My heart was too full. Across the street the gray cat lay dead, like my illusions.

GAS TANK PERMIT UPHELD BY NEAL

Despite protests of hundreds of residents of Dorchester, State Fire Marshal George C. Neal today confirmed the decision of the city council in granting a garage and gasoline-tank permit to Sam Swartz and Myer Peraner at Nos. 8 and 10 Harvard Street, near Washington street.

The tank will hold about 1,500 gallons. Residents of the district protested that the proposed garage and tank would be a fire menace. Neal said the garage will be fireproof.

Residents of the Chestnut Hill avenue district, who oppose the erection of a garage and a 2,000-gallon gasoline tank on the property of the Sargent Trust, will be given a public hearing Friday afternoon by Fire Marshal Neal.

Former Attorney-General Allen represents many of the protestants.

ARREST SAUGUS BOY WITH LOADED PISTOL

Charles Anderson, fifteen, of North Saugus was arrested today charged with having a loaded revolver in his possession. The arrest followed a row engaged in by Anderson and his neighbor, a negro called "Lucky" Smith. After exchanging uncomplimentary epithets, Anderson dashed into his house and returned with a loaded revolver. Smith called the police. The case will come up in the Saugus Court on Saturday.

QUINN BACKS CAMBRIDGE POLICE

Upholds Force Against Attack of Church Women; Captain Keaney Plans to Sue

Chief John McBride and the captains of all Cambridge police divisions were assured of the hearty support of Mayor Edward M. Quinn at a conference called by the mayor today.

Capt. James Keaney

Mayor Edward Quinn

The conference took place in Mayor Quinn's office and was the result of accusations made by North Cambridge women against Captain James M. Keaney of Station 4.

Mayor Quinn said that while he knew Cambridge to be the cleanest city in the Commonwealth, he nevertheless instructed the police officials to enforce the law with strict impartiality.

CAPTAIN PLANS SUIT.

The complaining women, members of the North Cambridge Federation of Churches, were not represented, and as far as could be learned they have failed to prefer charges against Captain Keaney.

The captain has retained counsel, and is contemplating bringing suit against the women for slander. They declared he was inefficient in cleaning up bootlegging, and in maintaining discipline among his own men.

The church women, headed by Mrs. Arthur N. MacKechnie, president of the federation, admitted to Chief McBride and Captain Keaney that their accusations were based on hearsay. They were told if they returned with facts, action would be taken. Thus far no evidence to support the accusations has been presented.

FAIL TO PRESENT FACTS.

"In all my forty-three years of service in the Cambridge department," said Captain Keaney, "this is the first time anything of the kind has happened. These women admit they have no facts and yet they do not hesitate to attack me and besmirch my reputation.

"I have retained counsel, and am now contemplating bringing suit for slander.

"These women say I have not cooperated with them in cleaning up bootleggers, but as a matter of fact they never asked me to co-operate. I have cleaned up bootlegging, however, and my district right now is the cleanest part of the city. I caught the head bootlegger and drove him out, and now have warrants for several others.

"As far as drunken police officers is concerned, the only evidence I have ever had in that connection, I presented in charges against two men. One was removed and the other reinstated by the city council."

Mayor Quinn said he would take no action, as he is convinced the police department is fully capable of handling existing conditions.

"As far as I can find out," he said, "the accusations against Captain Keaney were based on idle gossip."

900 NOW MISSING IN JAP DISASTER

Tokio, April 16 (By International News Service).—Advices today from Seoul magnify the disaster which accompanied the terrific wind storm along the coast of southern Korea Saturday. Official figures place the number of missing at 900. So far only fifty sailboats were lost. The monetary toll was estimated about $1,000,000.

U. S. Supreme Court Upholds Grain Futures Law

Washington, April 16.—The U. S. Supreme Court today declared constitutional the Grain Futures Trading Act, designed to prevent manipulation of the grain markets on board of trade and exchanges.

The first futures trading act was declared unconstitutional by the court because Congress sought to regulate the grain exchanges by using its taxing power.

The law was then amended, but was attacked by the Chicago Board of Trade and other big grain exchanges.

Today's decision is final in giving the Secretary of Agriculture power to regulate the exchanges.

8000 TEACHERS DISLOYAL, SAYS D. A. R. HEAD

Washington, April 16.—Bolshevism and Pacifism were brought under a raking fire today at the opening session of the annual Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. George Maynard Minor, president-general, asked American women to link themselves together for a battle against influences now at work to destroy American instutions and sugges. that a portion of the American public school system presented a fitting place to begin such a crusade.

More than 8,000 teachers in American schools, she said, not only are disloyal to their country, but are using their positions to disseminate disloyal doctrines.

The execution of Vicar-General Butchkavitch in Russia, the speaker said, was only the outward manifestation of a governmental policy which denies the home, the country and God.

As an evidence that all is not well with the administration of justice in the United States, she instanced the trial of William Z Foster in Michigan, and the failure to secure convictions in the Herrin Mine prosecutions.

The pacifists, Mrs. Minor said, are "trying to disarm America and kill patriotism in the hearts of her defenders." Of modern girls, she said:

"I believe that the girls of today are just as good as we were when we were of their age."

ROBBERY VICTIM IS INJURED BY LEAP

Charles G. Norris, fifty-nine years old, of No. 37 Earl street, Malden, reported to the police about a week ago that he had been robbed of $1,000 by men who offered him a lift home in their auto and left him unconscious from chloroform on the shores of the pond at Felsmere. He took the wrong train from the North Station yesterday and jumped when the train did not stop at the Malden station. Dr. W. W. Hartwell, who treated him, says his skull was fractured.

R. W. EMMONS SETTLES GIRL'S $30,000 SUIT

A $30,000 suit brought by Miss Frances Winder of Roxbury against Robert Wayles Emmons, captain of Harvard's baseball team in 1921, has been settled out of court, after a trial which had been in progress for several days. The terms of the settlement have not been given out.

The suit was brought by Miss Winder to recover for personal injuries sustained by her in Beverly on September 6, 1920, when a bicycle she was riding was in collision with an automobile belonging to Emmons. Miss Winder contended that her ankle was so seriously injured that she has been obliged to use a cane ever since, that she also suffered other injuries.

4 YOUTHS CAUGHT IN CHASE

Cambridge Boys Provide Enough Thrills for Real Movie in Brighton

Four Cambridge youngsters staged a movie thriller out Brighton way, their action in the final reel being a mad race with a pursuing patrolman, in which shots were fired.

Then there was a collision with a street car, after which the policeman went to the hospital with a cut nose.

Patrolman Roland W. Garrison was on traffic duty at Commonwealth and Harvard avenues. Earlier in the day he had received word to be on the lookout for an automobile reported missing from Cambridge.

Along came the car bearing the tell-tale number broadcasted by the Cambridge police. There were six youngsters in it. On they sped despite Garrison's order to stop.

COMMANDEERS CAR.

Garrison commandeered a car owned by Henry B. Cabot of Heath street, Brookline, and gave chase along Commonwealth avenue. The pursuing car came up to the fleeing youngsters two miles further along, near Lake street, at the Brighton-Newton line.

The six lads jumped and ran.

"Halt!" yelled Garrison.

The lads kept running. Then Garrison fired two shots

Four of the boys stopped, but the two others scampered through the Parkway near Chestnut Hill Reservoir.

Garrison bundled the four others into the car they had jumped from and, with one of the quartet at the wheel, directed them to the Brighton police station.

CRASHES INTO TROLLEY.

While proceeding down Chestnut Hill avenue the car crashed into an Elevated street car bound for Boston. The windshield was splintered and Garrison's nose was lacerated by the flying glass.

After the youths were booked Garrison went to the City Hospital, where his injury was treated.

The boys were turned over to the Cambridge police for juvenile court action.

They gave their names and addresses, all in Cambridge, as follows: Earl Wass, 16 years old, Winter street; James E. Cawley, sixteen, Norfolk street; James L. Walsh, fifteen, Haskell street, and James L. Canavan, sixteen, Market street.

SQUEALS OF PIGS LEAD TO ARREST

Being just pigs, five of the porcine species couldn't refrain from joining the raucous squealing of three of their mates whose throats were being slashed. This aroused the neighbors of Matthew A. Buckley of No. 56 Heath street, Roxbury, with the result that he appeared before Judge Hayden in Roxbury court today. Buckley pleaded not guilty to the charge of larceny of eight pigs and six hens from Patrick Donovan of Waltham, and was placed under $500 surety pending continuance of his case to April 24.

Donovan reported the loss of his pigs and fowl and word was flashed to the Boston police who didn't know where to look for them.

There was no trace of them until the squeals called the police to the Buckley basement.

As for the six hens, not a feather was found.

SHOW HORSE BURNED TO DEATH AT LENOX

Lenox, April 16.—A ribbon-winning horse was burned to death and loss estimated at $75,000 was caused when fire swept the combination stable and garage at Elm Court, the estate of Mrs. Henry White, wife of the former ambassador to France. Five other horses and two automobiles were saved with great difficulty by employes.

HIGH PRICE FLAYED BY HULTMAN

Necessaries of Life Commission Report Blames Bankers and Speculators

The Commission on Necessaries of Life today declared in a special report to the Legislature that the high prices of sugar are outrageous and unjust.

It suggested to the public to declare a boycott on sugar to force the prices back where they belong.

American banks which have gained control over the Cuban sugar crop and New York stockbroker gamblers in the necessaries of life are blamed by the commission for the terrific gypping which the public is suffering in the price of sugar.

The commission investigated the situation as the result of an order passed by the Legislature at the demand of Representative William A. Canty of Roxbury.

BUMPER CROP.

While the bankers, brokers and other gyppers have led the public to understand that there is a sugar shortage, Chairman Eugene C. Hultman of the commission in the report declared there will be more sugar raised this year than ever before in the world's history.

Last year, when sugar was extremely plentiful and available at very low prices, the total production was 17,637,728 tons. Hultman said the production this year was estimated at 17,988,000. There must be added to that the very heavy surplus left from last year's crops.

He said about 90 per cent. of the sugar used here comes from Cuba. During the war, sugar sold there was high as 20 cents a pound. Everybody got drunk with power and wealth. Cuba held her "Dance of the Millions." Then prices went down and came the sad awakening. A third of the banks in Cuba went broke.

FLOW REGULATED.

"Under the conditions existing in Cuba," said Hultman, "this year's crop of sugar is apparently in a few strong hands. The flow of raw sugar to market can be regulated so that the highest possible price may be obtained."

Hultman shows that last year 103.18 pounds of sugar was brought into the country for every man, woman and child. That was an increase of 20 per cent. There was no such increase in consumption, he said. Consequently, there was a heavy carryover.

The retail price of sugar has jumped from 7 to 11 cents a pound, 57 per cent.

"The commission is of the opinion," said the report, "that the dealings on the New York Sugar Exchange played an important part in the recent thimblerigging of sugar prices."

GAMBLE IN FUTURES.

The report shows that last year about 6,000,000 tons of sugar were traded in on that exchange, yet only 55,000 tons were actually delivered.

They gamble in futures. The gambler who sells futures may buy back his contract to sell. This gambling plays a large part in actually fixing the price of sugar which is bought, sold and delivered.

Some of the more interesting conclusions of the Commission are as follows:

"The recent rapid rise in the price of sugar was apparently caused by an adroit manipulation of the economic law of supply and demand. On the rising market many dealers in and users of sugar were stampeded into buying for speculative or hoarding purposes.

"The rise is not justified by an increased cost of production or refining. The world production of sugar for 1923 will apparently be greater than that of 1922.

SHOT DEAD IN RAID BY RUM BANDITS

Hammond Ind., April 16 (By International News Service).—Herbert J. Anderson, watchman at the Hammond Distillery Company here, was killed today by whiskey bandits, who made away with part of about 3,500 barrels of whiskey stored in the distillery. Six men were in the raiding party, according to Joseph Stachura, relief watchman, overpowered by the bandits.

FIVE CLUBS IN RACE

Chicago, Ill., April 16.—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, says that five clubs—Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, New York and St. Louis—have a chance for the junior major league flag.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

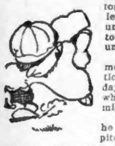
SHANKS WILL PLAY THIRD

Manager Chance has decided to play Shanks at third base and to put Skinner in centre field. The Peerless Leader is satisfied that Pittenger will not make a competent hot corner man.

BRAVES ARRIVE HOME ALL SET FOR OPENING WITH GIANTS

MITCHELL WORRIED OVER LONG LAYOFF

The Braves arrived home this morning ready for any kind of New England weather that may be tossed their way. After two cold, snowy and blustery days in Washington, nothing that Boston can produce will worry them greatly. The athletes are thinking of demanding fur lined Spring uniforms for the few opening series, or if that be too costly, of moving the league down into Florida until the middle of May or so.



Manager Mitchell, whose real worries start tomorrow, has one real fret just before the battle notion to fret about. He's afraid that the past three days of idleness may have softened up his pitchers, who before the return of northeast winds were in mighty fine shape.

"Laying off three or four days in the Spring," he explains, "is the worst thing possible for a pitcher who is in shape. He must get ready all over again. If he must go into a game he's likely to force his arm and then there's trouble."

So he's going to make all his flingers and all the rest of his ball tossers work, even if he must hire an armory or something like that. Fred will get the Boston College game in, if there's a possible chance, as he realizes that the initial tilt of his ball club against the Giants isn't going to be any picnic.

Half a Dozen Seem Certain to Stick in Big Show

Apart from the weather, though, everything is satisfactory. The manager has half a dozen new athletes who seem certain to stick in the big show for quite a while, and when that many are collected in one short Spring, there's plenty of cause for jubilation.

As we look back, there hasn't been a really good kid ball player acquired by the Braves for more than two years. Yet this Spring the club has three very promising pitchers—McNamara, Genewich and Benton; four mighty good new infielders—Conlon, Smith Padgett and Henry; and two outfielders likely to linger—Bagwell and Felix.

Three of the Kids Will Start Against the Giants

Quite a Spring collection when you think it over, as good a bunch as any of the clubs with the million dollar bankrolls wereable to gather. Three of the kids, McNamara, Conlon and Bagwell, will start against the Giants tomorrow, and that little feature in itself should make the opening day popular for the fans, who have been paging changes on our ball clubs for several years.

Mitch isn't claiming any pennants. No more are the players. But the crowd expects to be up close to the first division, if not in there. The club has confidence in itself which is at least half the battle. The ambition of the youngsters has been contagious. The veterans are hustling, and a ball club that scraps has the edge on the field with any of the lucky breaks at all.

Captain Southworth When Interviewed Said Something

Captain Southworth naturally should be interviewed at this crucial crossing of the Spring. We did that, and he emitted the following:

"There are two or three players on our club who have been just on the verge of having great years for several seasons. Somehow we have a feeling that they will come through this time, and if they do, we'll be in there. It only takes a little extra kick to get those close games, and you have it when somebody is starring as a habit.

"Then we have some mighty fine kids, and can go along knowing that if a regular is hurt there's somebody good to take his place. That feeling does away with the discouragement that follows accidents on a team that hasn't enough subs. We hadn't any real good ones a year ago, so we fell to pieces as soon as a few of us were badly hurt.

Nobody on the Club Can Be Sure of Job

"This year, though, there are so many players kicking around that nobody on the club can be sure of his job. Even the regular pitchers have something to worry about, with kids like McNamara on the team. We may not set the world on fire but I have a hunch there'll be plenty of good fighting baseball this Summer on Braves Field. And we'll be on the fighting end."

That being settled, we might mention the fact that Mitch must use all his good kid pitchers this week, unless the weather gums things up, as it probably will. There are six games in five days, quite an assignment for early Spring. Watson, Marquard and Oeschger are ready to go the route, but Miller and Fillingim still lack a lot of their stuff. And even the veterans can't be chased out twice in five afternoons, at the beginning of things.

GIANTS TAKE LAST GAME FROM THE SOX

By Universal Service.

New York, April 15.—McGraw's World's Champion Giants took the final game of the series today from the White Six, 11 to 6.

Five runs in the seventh, after the Sox had tied the game at three all in their half, gave victory to New York.

John Scott, the world's series hero, took over the box work from McQuillan in the eighth and held the White Sox easily until the end of the inning when the game was called to permit the visitors to catch a train.

CONLON LEADS BRAVES WITH .390 MARK

Two of the Braves' "rookies" have made good all the pretty things Nick Flatley has said about them in his glowing reports from the Spring training tour. Conlon, ex-Harvard captain and shortstop, returns North with the remarkable distinction of leading all the Braves' regulars in batting with the phenomenal mark of .390; Bagwell heads all the outfielders with his batting average of .343.

These notable achievements have been made against real major league pitching, for with the exception of two games with St. Petersburg, the Braves played only big league games.

For the same reason the averages made by O'Neill, Boeckel, Felix and Southworth are of more than usual purport.

The Red Sox come up to the scratch with what looks like formidable hitting power. The team batting is .303, but it represents little that can be counted upon, for outside of three games played with the Pirates, all the Spring series' games were against all minor leaguers. Burns, Harris, Shanks and Collins appear to be in their customary Spring batting form.

The tables show the Spring performances of the teams.

WILLARD READY FOR BELL AT ANY MINUTE

By ED W. COCHRANE.

Excelsior Springs, Mo., April 16.—Jess Willard, who will meet Floyd Johnson of Iowa in the Yankee Stadium May 12, for the benefit of the New York Milk Fund, is in splendid physical condition.

The big fellow worked out before an immense crowd and made believers of all. He boxed as he has never done since coming here, punched the bag, wrestled about the ring, skipped the rope, in all nineteen rounds, and finished in splendid shape.

His work was most convincing. He showed a disposition to go at top speed all the while and never showed the least evidence of tiring. All of the rounds he worked at each exercise were of three minutes' duration.

In conversation with Ray Archer, his manager, I learned that Willard was on the road for five miles in the morning, then went riding across the country for nearly two hours astride the horse presented to him by citizens.

After eating his evening meal Willard again took to the road for a two-mile stroll to digest his food. He never seems tired, and is longing for the date of the battle. To me he appears fit to answer the bell at any minute.

It is without hesitation I place the stamp of approval on the "new Jess Willard." Knowing him for more than ten years, in varied stages of his career, I cannot recall ever seeing him display as much pep and fighting spirit as he is showing during these days of training.

HARMON WILL MEET CARNEY ON HOLIDAY

Willie Harmon, the Dorchester welterweight who won thirty starts in a row before losing to Sailor Friedman, is matched to battle Billy Carney, the pride of New Bedford, for ten rounds on Patriots' Day at the Arena A. C., New Bedford. The weight will be 145 pounds at 3 o'clock the day of the battle.

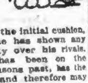
CLINTON TO FIGHT AGAINST MITCHELL

Tonight at the Broadway Exhibition Club of Brooklyn, N. Y., Johnny Clinton will go over the 10-round route with Ray Mitchell of Philadelphia. Mitchell and Clinton will play to a sell-out as both are big favorites with the New York boxing fans. Clinton has won his last nine starts in easy style.

TUFTS GOES TO SOUTH ON TUESDAY

Coach Nash is uncertain who will be taken on Tufts' Southern trip, on which the team will leave Tuesday evening.

Tufts has played two games against rather indifferent opposition and the showing has not been impressive.



At first base the Tufts mentor has a real problem on his hands. Hutchins, Corbett and Cohen have been used at the initial cushion, but thus far none has shown any marked superiority over his rivals. Hutchins, who has been on the squad for two seasons past, has the most experience and therefore may be chosen to start the year as the regular first sacker.

The hot corner is another position which has not been definitely assigned to anyone. Smith, a transfer from University of Vermont, had the call in the first two games, but his throwing to bases was sadly at fault and may serve to give Roger Atherton a chance to prove his ability as an infielder.

Atherton reported to the squad as an outfielder, but owing to the large number of candidates for garden berths was shifted to the infield. Coach Nash looks upon him as a fine prospect at third where his exceptionally strong arm and ability to clout the horsehide make him a strong contender.

In Loud, Crowley, Roach, White, Terrill and Kaneally, Tufts has a string of batsmen who should hit for well over .300. With such offensive strength as this the Brown and Blue twirlers should have little trouble in winning a majority of their games provided they can show a fair amount of effectiveness. In Art Kroog, Tufts has a boxman who is expected to rank with the best in college circles.

YANKEES WIN AFTER HOT ELEVEN INNINGS

By Universal Service.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 15.—The Dodgers forced the Yankees to eleven innings before admitting defeat. The final score was 9 to 8.

In the eleventh inning the Yankees scored four runs, but Brooklyn plunged in and swung away at the ball for a tally of three runs and came within a scratch of evening matters.

Carl Mays started the pitching for New York and in turn Bullet Joe Bush, Fred Spates and Oscar Roettger had their fling.

Dick Dickerman and Art Decatur filled that berth for the Dodgers.

The Claymonts would like to get in touch with uniformed teams, twelve and thirteen years of age. Call J. Kelliher, No. 21 North Monroe street; Dorchester 4231.

CHANCE CONFIDENT RED SOX WILL WIN FIRST

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

George Burns at first, Bub McMillan at second, Howard Shanks at third, Chick Fewster at short, Slug Harris in left, Camp Skinner in centre, Shauno Collins in right, and Howard Ehmke and Al DeVormer as the battery, arranged in an order that will bring the heavy hitters to the plate when heavy hitting counts, is the Red Sox combination that will officially open the new Yankee Stadium on Wednesday afternoon.

And that combination will open the aforesaid Stadium with a Red Sox victory is its confident expectation, to say nothing of its avowed determination.

The Sox don't like the Yanks.

The rival owners may be on the friendliest of terms—not so the rival managers and the rival players.

"Drat the manager that allows his players to get such ideas" was a recent remark by Frank Chance after he had found it necessary and somewhat difficult to re-arrange the line of thought and action of certain ex-Yankees now on the Red Sox pay roll—only Frank didn't say "drat."

"Let us at that bunch of four-flushers," is the plea of the Red Sox players.

Bitterness Is Founded on Treatment While Yanks

The bitterness toward the Yanks and their manager, now housed in the hearts of many members of the Red Sox crew, is founded upon the treatment accorded them while on the New York roster.

For example there's Chick Fewster.

Chick was the elephant's ear muffs with the Gotham gang until he got beaned and was forced to lay off. Then when he left the hospital and intended to stage a comeback, they wouldn't let him—instead, they traded him to last year's last place club.

Take for another example Bub McMillan.

Bub Wanted a Regular Position on the Nine

Bub likes to play baseball, and he can play baseball, and like all who can and who like to play the game, Bub wanted a regular position on the Yankee nine. Said the Yanks to Bub, "You can play the outfield until Babe Ruth's suspension is lifted," and later, "You can play the infield until we land Joe Dugan."

Bub made good in both positions; was a conspicuous figure in that long string of Yankee victories that enabled the club to coast into the pennant; but he was obliged to give way to Ruth, and then he was obliged to give way to Dugan, and then he must spend his remaining days sitting heavy-heartedly on the Yankee bench.

Similar stories might be told of Al DeVormer, George Murray, Johnnie Mitchell, Lefty O'Doul, Alec Ferguson and others, who in the past year or two have worn Yankee uniforms, for the Yanks and their manager have made the way difficult for young and aspiring ball players.

Things of that sort have given birth to the bitterness toward the Yanks that is found in this season's Boston team, and to the desperate determination that the new stadium will be opened by a Red Sox triumph, and that throughout the close approaching season the socks of the Red Sox will serve as drumbeats in the dirge over the Yanks' pennant hopes.

And those baseball fans who expect to see a drab, spiritless Red Sox team take the field, are in for a real surprise.

The fellow who was responsible for the famous Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance combination of the old Cubs, has a Fewster-to-McMillan-to-Burns proposition that is about as bright and breezy as a fan could ask for, and if the work in the barn-storming voyage serves as any indication, the Harris-Skinner-Collins collection in the outfield is a sweet fielding, powerful hitting trio.

They Carry Color Enough to Entertain the Fans

The peppery, grasshopper-like Fewster, the booming-voiced Harris and the shrill-toned Shanks carry color enough to entertain baseball followers, and the team as a whole, under Frank Chance's tutelage has become a yapping, scrapping outfit that lets the world and the umpires know a ball game is on and the Sox are not content with the worst of things.

And it is a team that does not surrender the moment its rival gains the lead. A dozen times since its opening exhibition game with the Pittsburgh Pirates it has come from behind to tie or to lead its opponent and on three occasions ninth or tenth inning rallies have figured in thrilling Sox triumphs.

With Good Pitching Club Will Be Dangerous

Given any sort of pitching the Sox will prove dangerous to any club in their league.

However, the sort of pitching they will get from twirlers other than Howard Ehmke, Alex Ferguson and Jack Quinn, when the last recovers from his injury, remains to be seen. On that issue will be determined the Sox place in the American League standing.

TONY THOMAS FLARES BRIGHTLY IN THE PUGILISTIC SKIES

NEW SENSATION SHOWS AT ARMORY CLUB

By JACK CONWAY.

Ring Stars flare along the pugilistic horizon like bursting shells did over the front line trenches. When one boxing bomb has exploded another screeches overhead for recognition. The public gives its attention to the new sensation. The man or thing that has passed the crest must sink into oblivion.

The Spanish Armada, the Monitor with its round turret, Dewey's fleet, British much-touted navy and the armies of massed soldiers, all had their day.

Submarines, airplanes and swift destroyers, with the radio and TNT as gun crews, laugh at the kings of other years.

So it is in the ring, most exacting branch of sport.

Two weeks ago Henry Ford, North End bantamweight, was merrily on his way toward a bout with Joe Lynch for the world's championship. Today he is trying to explain away a defeat at the hands of Tony Thomas, New Bedford warrior.

[illegible] is today ranked with the best bantamweights in this part of the country. He has battered against the door of the Hall of Fame. And it has been opened to him.

Frankie Conway of Philadelphia was the first to go down before the Thomas drive. Barney Snyder of Roxbury was next to meet defeat.

* * *

Then the promoters called upon Henry Ford. They were of the opinion that he possessed the necessary ability to win over Thomas. The spirit of conquest flared too high in Thomas' heart. A rival's reputation did not mean anything to him. He faced the foe, did his best and won. It has been the same with all great men from the days of Socrates down.

* * *

Thomas intends to keep going forward. If punching ability, aggressiveness, a stout heart, brains and courage will gain the victory, his ambition will not be battered to pieces upon the jagged rocks that surround the entrance to the Harbor of Champions.

Thomas will try to continue his forward march when he clashes with Ruby Levine of Lewiston in one of the 10-round bouts at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night.

Levine is not a champion, but he is tough. He has [illegible] worthy foes and has [illegible] well. He says he will upset Thomas.

Time will give the answer.

* * *

George Robinson, veteran Cambridge boxer, will oppose Battling McCreary of this city in the feature ten-round number. This contest is for the New England light-heavyweight championship. Robinson and McCreary are rated with the best men of their weight in the world.

In the last Boston start Robinson won over Lee Anderson, former world's colored light-heavyweight champion. McCreary carried off the honors in his last appearance here. Jack Taylor of New York, a protege of Tom O'Rourke, was the victim.

* * *

Frankie Ryan of Everett and Johnny Fox of Woburn will meet in another ten round mill. This should be a fast, clever bout.

Eddie Williams and Billy Blakie are down to go eight frames.

* * *

A good show. Above all things take a look at Thomas. He may be a champion some day. An unconquerable spirit can reach any heights.

* * *

There will be action at the Casino A. C. of Lynn tonight when Wildman Gould battles Jimmy Cox of Worcester. Cox modestly says he will knock Gould out.

* * *

Floyd Johnson turns his back on Massachusetts and New Jersey so that he may battle Jess Willard at the great Milk Fund show in New York on May 12. Johnson was willing to meet Fred Fulton, but the New York Commission barred the match. The youthful Californian says he will be willing to knock out Fulton after he has toppled over Jess Willard. If confidence means anything, Johnson should win from Willard.

* * *

And from his [illegible] camp Willard wires:

"I shall win within six rounds."

* * *

Which is correct? If Willard is to gain the victory he must do so quickly. The longer the match goes the better Johnson's chances will be. Age stumbles and falters after the bell sounds at the end of the sixth frame.

* * *

Willard, past forty, will have to defeat two opponents—Johnson and declining years.

SHEVLIN TACKLES JONES TONIGHT

Eddie Shevlin, New England welterweight champion, will have Jimmy Jones, one of the best welterweights in the country, as an opponent in a 10-round bout at Pittsburgh tonight.

Eddie Shevlin.

Shevlin will have to display all of his amazing ability in order to gain the victory. Jones has [illegible] steadily and is one of the chief contenders for Mickey Walker's title.

Shevlin has been unable to get bouts in New England as he outclasses all of the local boys. It takes Dave Shade, George Ward or one o fthe other headliners to make things interesting for the Roxbury favorite who has been made a national boxing card as a result of the efforts of Billy Henderson.

GOULD AND COX CLASH TONIGHT

There will be a real action battle at the Casino A. C. of Lynn tonight.

Young Gould

Wildman Gould of Brockton is billed to clash with Jimmy Cox, another two handed walloper, in the feature bout of ten rounds.

Gould has been one of the most sensational battlers to show his wares in this part of the country. He can wallop with either hand, while he always forces the issue.

Cox is also a two-fisted gentleman and will try to stop Gould.

Matchmaker Jack Murphy has billed the usual high-class preliminary card.

HARVARD'S TENNIS STARS GO SOUTH

Six members of the Harvard varsity tennis team are touring the South this week. The list of players on the Crimson outfit includes prominent players including Bill Ingraham, the Providence youth, who defeated Captain Norman Peach of the Australian Davis Cup team in the national championships two seasons ago, Karl Pfaffman, who received a national rating two years back, and Captain Morris Duane, who is a cousin of R. Norris Williams.

The other three players on the excursion are George Guild, Alden Briggs and Palmer Dixon. Matches will be played with country club and tennis club teams in Virginia and the District of Columbia and the United States Naval Academy team will be encountered at Annapolis.

ABE FRIEDMAN IS READY FOR SUGGS

Abe Friedman, the most consistent challenger of Joe Lynch, the world's bantamweight champion, is one of the few contenders who does not draw the color line. Friedman has boxed Danny Edwards twice and stands ready now to box Chick Suggs, who has asserted that the New England champion is afraid of him.

Eddie Mack, manager of Friedman, declared that all that the manager of Suggs, who has been making all the noise that the Ghetto champion is afraid of Suggs, is to get a promoter to stage the match, offer satisfactory inducements and have Suggs at the required poundage for the contest.

STASIAK TO TAKE ON HINDU STAR

Wrestling fans who want to see Stanley Stasiak, the Polish lion, defeated, may have their wish up at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night.

Stanley Stasiak.

For the first time he will meet an opponent larger than himself. Gobar, the champion of India, will be his opponent and the fact that he weighs 275 pounds and is as tall at Stasiak makes it look like a busy evening for the big Pole.

When the Hindu first came to this country he was supposed to eat gold as an aid to build up his strength. He has had phenomenal success in this country and while he hasn't always won all his matches he has always given a good account of himself, and his encounters have included some of the top-notchers of the game. The match Thursday night will be best two falls in three to a positive finish.

Another bout on the card that will attract unusual interest is between Ernest Siegfried, the German oak, and John Rogalaski, the man who gave Stasiak a run for his money here on February 22.

Siegfried is especially anxious to meeet either Calza or Stasiak in a finish match here. The fact that he forced Strangler Ed Lewis to leave New York and all the so-called real wrestlers are sidestepping him, speaks for his ability.

Another bout on the card is between John Kilonis, the Greek international champion, and Leo Hayatt, the Syrian champion. This match should be a hummer, as Kilonis is out to make good in order to force his countryman, George Kotsonaros, to meet him.

Sam Smith will referee all the bouts.

ABE FRIEDMAN HAS BATTLE WITH GRAY

Abe Friedman, the New England bantamweight champion, will go to the post next Monday night with Johnny Gray of Brooklyn for twelve rounds at the Broadway Exhibition Club of Brooklyn.

Friedman will also clash with Irish Johnny Curtin at the Arena A. C. of Jersey City on April 30. Curtin and Friedman will go over the twelve round route. They have met five times and Friedman won four of the starts.

Neponsets Want Games

The Neponset Town team is looking for games with any semi-pro teams in the State away from home. A reasonable guarantee is expected. Write to Manager Joseph Kodad, No. 527 Ashmont street, Dorchester, or call Dorchester 5600 between 7:30 and 8:30 p. m.

PADGETT OUT FOR WALKER BOUT

Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, has cause for worry.

Mickey Walker

Cowboy Padgett of Kansas City has started on his trail. The Westerner is one of th ebest of the new crop of welterweights. He first attracted attention when he gave Jack Britton a merry battle. Later he fought Dave Shade to a draw. Now he's after Walker.

Out in the West, Padgett is a tremendous card. He always plays to capacity houses. This is on account of his aggressiveness and hitting power. These assets usually enable him to win.

The cowboy fighter will parade into Boston this week. He will probably disregard Pullmans and such things and ride into town on a Western bronco.

Padgett is signed to battle Dave Shade, California welterweight and chief contender for Walker's title, in a ten round mill at the Arena A. C.'s show at the Boston Arena next Monday night. Shade wasn't over-anxious to battle Padgett, but as there was no other opponent in sight with whom he could draw a big gate he agreed to risk a meeting with the cowboy.

Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Arena Club says he will announce a preliminary card which will start the town talking. The Arena Club has always spent more money on prelims than our other organizations and as a result the fans have profited.

WALKER WOULD NOT TAKE CLINTON BOUT

Nick Harney, the Worcester promoter, tried to get Archie Walker to meet Johnny Clinton at his club on April 19, but Walker declined the match and gave as an excuse that Clinton was too tough.

Mt. Hopes Want Games

The Mt. Hope Town Team has reorganized and is open to challenges from all amateurs and semi-pro teams in the State. Managers who wish to communicate write to Joseph F. Whalen, No. 116 Brown ave., Roslindale, or phone Parkway, 00106.

GEORGE F. PEARSON, No. 418 Pierce bldg., Copley sq., Boston

"Oh, what a smart dog I have Cookie is his name because he's so fond of sweets I trained him so that I would put a penny in his mouth He would run over to the bakeshop around the corner and drop the penny in the baker's hand and get a cookie He did this for several weeks and then one day when I happened to come to the bakeshop the baker told me Cookie hadn't been around for eight or nine days The next day when I gave Cookie her penny, I followed her Instead of going to the bakeshop she went into the backyard and started digging There were nine of the pennies buried and with the one I gave her, that made ten She then went to the bakeshop with the ten pennies in her mouth dropped them in the baker's hand and pointed to some strawberry shortcake She got it and departed in high spirits"

"You will notice that I live on High street I'll tell you how the street came to be named I was one of the first to live on this street years ago Instead of digging post holes I cut some trees that formed a square leaving stumps about four feet high, and built my house on those stumps I then went to sleep and in the morning those stumps had grown a hundred feet or more For several months I lived in that aerial house and that's how they came to call it High street"

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

IT'S very seldom that you ever hear a squeaky pair of shoes any more. The only time they make any noise now is when they're too big and your feet rattle in them.

IN the olden days when a man would buy a new pair of shoes he'd have to carry an oil can with him.

OF course if he was wealthy he'd hire an engineer to go with him whenever he went out walking.

THE shoes used to squeak way off key, but for three dollars you couldn't expect to buy a pair that were tuned.

A LOT of people used to buy shoes on credit and the stores wanted them to squeak so that they could hear the noise in case the purchaser started walking out of town with them.

AS long as the store could hear the squeaking very plainly they knew that the guy who bought them was still in the city

STILL, if a guy was a dead beat he could take a taxicab or crawl on his hands and knees until he got past the city limits

AS soon as the shoes were paid for you could go back to the store where you bought them and they'd take the squeak out.

EVERYBODY'S shoes made a lot of noise. It took a smart man to be a detective in those days.

MOST of the sleuths had to go barefooted before O Sullivan invented rubber heels

THE Indians would have been out of luck with those squeaky shoes, trying to sneak up on a lion or a tiger.

OF course the lions wouldn't devour the shoes but they would have eaten what was inside of them.

THIS is one reason the Red Men didn't wear shoes the animals wouldn't have known how to unlace them

THEY could have worn button shoes but very few wild animals carried button hooks in those days.

SQUEAKY shoes were all right in the army, they made the enemy think we had twice as many soldiers as we really had

WE could have won some of our wars sooner if we put the same kind of shoes on the horses

THE enemy couldn't have told whether the cavalry was galloping or walking

AND now for several years the cobblers have been making quiet shoes but the hosiery manufacturers are still turning out noisy socks.

HAVING THE MERE ANIMAL SPIRIT GETS YOU NOWHERE

As soon as you become angry at someone, do you think of doing that person bodily injury?

You think it would be gratifying to you to see him lying crushed and bleeding at your feet, isn't it true?

You allow yourself to get worked up to such a pitch that there is murder in your heart, or as near it as possible while keeping from committing a crime

If you would use a bit of common sense you would know that such thoughts and feelings injure you physically if not the other person.

Are you not ashamed of the things you have contemplated as a means of "getting even" with some person against whom you have a grievance?

If you gave as much thought to placing yourself in a position where this man could have no influence on your job or your standing, as you do to thoughts of revenge by doing him a physical injury you would be more successful and far happier.

Why cultivate the animal spirit, the fighting element in your makeup when it gets you nowhere?

A RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

SOME folks like cocktails ere they dine, some take a pickled fish; in bygone days a sip of wine was all that some could wish. Hors d'oeuvres play now a leading part in many bills of fare, and lots of chaps would never eat without their caviar. In languid mood they loll around from morning until night, demanding that some food be found to tempt their appetite. Day in and out they keep their seat within an easy chair, and always when it's time to eat they ask for tid-bits rare. And when the noon-tide whistle blows they neither shout nor grin, for they, alas, are classed with those who do not toil or spin. They can not estimate their loss when they sit down to dine, for hunger is the piquant sauce that makes poor fare seem fine. And if you've shovelled coal all day or pushed the patent plow, you do not have so much to say about your choice of chow. You don't insist on costly things your appetite to whet, but when the bell for dinner rings you take what you can get. Anon when supper-time draws nigh you hasten with a dash to grab your share of pumpkin pie, your portion of the hash. When you have toiled from break of day with harrow, hod or hoe, the food [illegible] to stow away [illegible] slow. THIS is the anniversary of the death, in 1446, of Filippo Brunelleschi, founder of the architecture of the Renaissance. His final and greatest work was the building of the Pitti Palace in Florence.

The Origin of Ducat

THE word ducat, a coin of wide use through the Middle Ages, got its name from the fact that it was first struck by the dukes. The ducat was first coined by Robert, King of Cicily, in 1240.

PLAYING WITH FATE

A Story of a Man and a Flirt, but the Man Could Not Remain Long Away From the Girl of His Real Love

By A. M. Crawford

"DON'T squeeze my hand, Phil, and, for Heaven's sake let me enjoy this smoke without having to listen to all that tommyrot about being in love! Wake up! You're living in the twentieth century. We've progressed beyond silly things like mooning around and thinking ourselves in love. You certainly must have been brought up in an old-fashioned home."

Pretty, petite, spoiled Marilyn Carter tossed her bobbed head, and, leaning back on the side of the chummy roadster, parked without lights near the Country Club entrance, blew smoke rings into the starry April night.

Falling In Love

"Certainly not. Thrills don't happen any more unless you skid and see yourself being hurled down an embankment." Marilyn laughed lightly. "You're an awfully amusing person, really! A regular Rip Van Winkle, waking up to find the world a changed place."

"Well, you have a waking up coming to you, pretty little thing!"

"I certainly have if Ted Mouldon finds that I'm missing from that jazz jubilee in there, now that it's his time to step on my toes." Marilyn tossed a glowing cigarette into the fragrant darkness.

Phil Martin from his height of six feet looked down at the little figure in soft crepe beside him.

For weeks he had been trying to tell her that he loved her and she had always laughed at him and attempted to have him believe that she thought herself superior to such idle nonsense as sentimentality. She paused in the doorway and looked up at him archly, evidently expecting him to tell her, as he usually did, that he would be waiting for her when the dance was over.

But for once he failed to do the expected. "Please introduce me to that lovely girl in the flame-colored dress."

Marilyn blinked. "That's Fay Waggoner. She'll fall for your line."

Phil proceeded to give Fay a great rush. He did not approach Marilyn until the strain of "Home Sweet Home" stirred young feet to their final fling for the evening. He did not mention Fay. Neither did Marilyn, until they had reached her own doorstep.

She gave him her slim, cool little hand. "Happy dreams of black heads and red rags!" she said, and Phil, failing to kiss the hand as he usually did, remarked quickly, "You couldn't wish me anything kinder. Red's going to be my favorite color for this time on!"

No flowers, no books, no candy from Phil the next day. That was unexpected, too. No telephone calls.

For two days Marilyn did not see him. Then at the Simmonds dinner dance she beheld him playing the devoted to Fay. And as if by magic, sweet, nondescript little Fay became a beauty and a belle.

It was a strangely new sensation for Marilyn to see another girl and not even a beautiful girl, step into her own shoes and dance right away, carrying half the eligibles in her train. She spent long hours in a darkened room trying to recall just what she had said or done to cause Phil to swerve from pursuit of her.

At a Distance

She had not seen Phil for a week and then only at a distance. She forced herself to be nice to Fay Waggoner, but she hated her with a primitiveness that was appalling. That little black-haired thing to take Phil right away! Then she decided to go away on a visit.

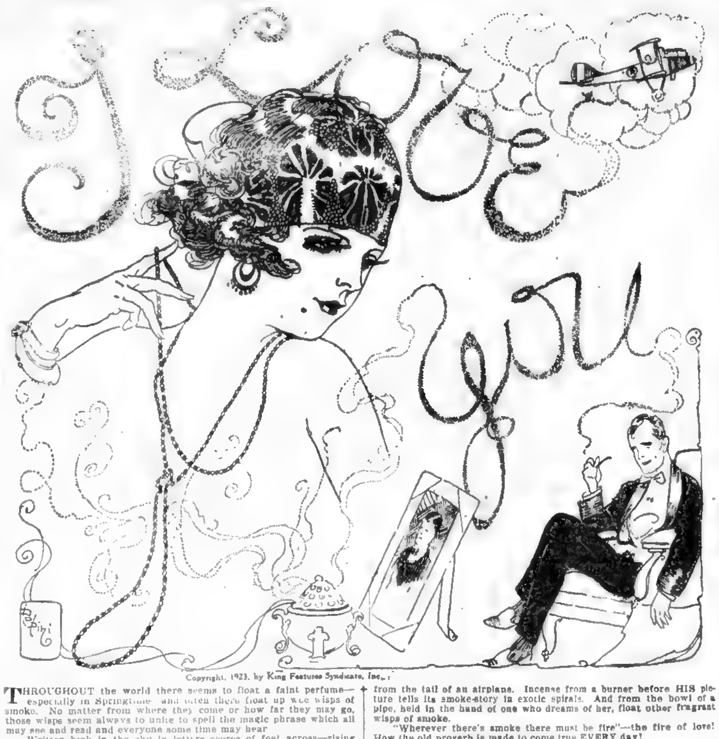
A car roared up to the curb and a tall figure hurled itself out and up the steps two at a time. She looked up in amazement at Phil Martin. He dropped down on the topmost step, at her feet, and literally put his arms around her.

"I've just heard that you're going away—on a visit. Oh, Marilyn, I simply cannot stand it—for you to go away!"

Somehow she found herself down on the step beside him, her arms clinging as tightly as his, as they pledged themselves to a glorious, unbelievably happy future! So dream all the lovers of the world.

Smoke Dreams

DRAWN BY POPINI



Copyright, 1923, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THROUGHOUT the world there seems to float a faint perfume—especially in Springtime—and often there float up wee wisps of smoke. No matter from where they come or how far they may go, those wisps seem always to unite to spell the magic phrase which all may see and read and everyone some time may hear.

Written high in the sky in letters scores of feet across—rising like a giant's alphabet—magic words may sometimes be seen trailing from the tail of an airplane. Incense from a burner before HIS picture tells its smoke-story in exotic spirals. And from the bowl of a pipe, held in the hand of one who dreams of her, float other fragrant wisps of smoke.

"Wherever there's smoke there must be fire"—the fire of love! How the old proverb is made to come true EVERY day!

—POPINI.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Anne Has a Talk With Jim and Feels That He Never Was So Far Away From Her When He Was in France

By Ann Lisle

"I'M glad you phoned to—reassure me," I said blankly, trying to keep a tremble out of my voice.

Jim laughed. There was a strange note in his laughter. I cut across it with a nervous desire to alter his mood.

"Did you—get anything? Did you see anyone important?"

"How much information do you think I can afford to give you over the phone?" Jim's voice was curt.

"Couldn't you risk saying that you did or didn't see someone important?" I ventured, with an attempt at playfulness. "We might seem to be discussing the foreign loan to Ruritania or some mythical kingdom."

"I'm out of touch with all this repartee," replied Jim. "I've been off in rough places working like a dog on a big proposition. I've got my hand out of the social stuff. I'm not much of a lady's man—these days. Jeanie told me you had a bangup dinner at Carlotta's and that I was invited. I didn't stop for any more news when she said you were there and Neal took you to Betty's. Anyway, the one thing that mattered wasn't the sort of subject I'd discuss, even with Jeanie."

"What was that?" I asked, half fearfully.

Norreys There

"Was that precious person known as Norreys among those present?" demanded Jim, hotly, evidently forgetting all he'd said about caution over the telephone.

"Of course," I replied, accenting it deliberately. "If you think a moment you'll realize he'd have to be at—Carlotta's."

"Sidestepping a bit, aren't you?" sneered Jim.

"No, I'm not," I flung back hotly. "Only this is another of those things we can't discuss over the telephone."

"If that isn't just like a woman!" snarled Jim. "You'd risk talking over matters on which—a fortune hinges, but a bit of—chatter, gossip—is sacred."

"Oh, Jim, I protested, near tears. Are you being fair to me? I wasn't planning to plan any names when I asked if you'd unearthed anything important. A 'Yes' or a 'No' wouldn't have committed you to much. It's hard enough to be separated from you again, but not even to know——"

"Whose fault is the separa asked Jim in his loftiest t "No sane man would ever think of looking for you anywhere but at Jeanie's where you were last nig How am I to keep track of yo you jump about like a grassh per? But I'm tired now. I'll t to see you tomorrow for lun Don't keep me here chinning a night. Good night, Anne."

"Good night," I whispered.

I slipped the receiver back into the little arms spread to hold it and leaned my face against my own arm, clinging to the sense of warmth that it gave me.

I was freezing cold. Going out into the kitchen I poured myself a cup of chocolate I'd been keeping hot for Jim. But I couldn't drink it.

I set the things away, turned out the tiny burner on the gas stove and went to my room.

Jim never seemed so far away when he was in Mexico.

Endless Hours

The hours of the night I spent alone in Betty's apartment seemed endless and black. I longed for sleep so I could forget that Jim was at Dreamwold— stead of with me. But when I f asleep at last it was to dream th Jim was taking me sleighing down the side of a volcano and telling me to sit close to him if I was cold.

The dream seemed very real and I woke thinking I heard the sleigh bells. Then I realized that the telephone was ringing. All my unhappiness came crowding back into my mind. It didn't seem worth while to answer the tel phone. But I got up and slipp mechanically into robe and sl pers.

Suddenly, almost of themselves my feet began flying down th hall. The telephone call must from Jim. Perhaps he also lain awake through the g hours thinking of me.

But the voice which replied t my eager hello was not Jim. Warm and kindly, Ralph Lacy's voice sounded in my ear. I steadied myself and listened.

"Good morning, Mrs. Harrison, Lacy speaking. Sorry to get you up so early. Hope you stopped to get into something warm. If not I'll hold the wire. It's mighty chilly at this hour."

A FINE SERIES OF PRACTICAL VALUE

By Maria Jeritza,

The Famous Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

WHAT experience is more thrilling, both in present enjoyment and promise of happiness to come, than the first really mild Spring weather?

No matter how many Springs may have come and gone in our experience, even though the Winters of our lives may have left flecks of white in our hair, still each Spring is a new miracle. We catch an echo of our childish wonder and rapture—and rush out into the sunshine.

And Spring days are bountiful in their gifts of beauty. They bring to us—or should, if we are receptive—much of their own fresh grace and light-hearted charm.

What if the wind does blow stray stresses about and slap at cheeks and lips in blustering, friendly mischief? What though April follow her "girlish laughter" with "girlish tears"? Her storms may blow the rain in our faces and send us indoors shower-drenched, but she cannot dampen our spirits, for her tears are as merry nearly as her laughter.

The secret of getting 100 per cent enjoyment and benefit from Spring weather may be expressed in one word—"preparedness."

Dress for the weather, then you can safely and gayly defy it. This means—unless you are in the country and go bareheaded—a snug little cap or hat, which the wind can't blow away. A few extra hairpins, a hair net, a veil not thick and just strong enough to hold your hair—and your armor will be invincible, so far as the wind is concerned.

Wear comfortable, loose sport clothes for your long walks—the sensible kind that a shower won't ruin. Don your walking boots and also your rubbers if you are going where you know Spring thaws have left a coating of mud.

If you must be "dressed up," protect your delicate frocks with a sensible wrap and carry an umbrella.

Don't be alarmed though you should be drenched to the skin by an unexpected storm. So long as you are exercising out of doors you may be sure you will be in no danger. Then as soon as you get home you will of course change to dry clothing and make yourself warm and comfortable. In this way you should be no worse for your drenching than the violets you brought home with you.

Upon your return you may like to rub gently into your lips and cheeks any one of the several good almond lotions to be had at such a reasonable cost.

And this home-made lotion will sooth your lips if they are chapped:

Cocoa butter	¼ ounce
Pure lard	4 ounces
White wax	¼ ounce
Powdered alum	¼ ounce

Melt these ingredients together by placing them in a bowl over a pan of hot water. If you prefer, you can color the mixture with carmine. Rub the mixture into your lips whenever you feel that it would be refreshing.

But above all, get outdoors every day, rain or shine! Let the Spring air blow roses into your lips and cheeks and sparkle into your eyes.

By adopting these few common-sense measures you will prove in your own experience, that Spring days are beauty days.

FURNITURE IN HOME

By Marian Moore

ALTHOUGH a [illegible] room has dark oaken panels, it may yet be redeemed [illegible] of everlasting darkness if the home-maker chooses her curtains and furnishings wisely. No heavy draperies for the north windows, if the maximum amount of light is to be obtained, and the atmosphere of lightness and airiness should be carried out in the furniture, as well.

The dining room in the photograph has three north windows, the lower sash having leaded panes, which partially redeem the dark paneling. White marquisette curtains, cut off at the sill, with ruffles and tie-backs of the same material, are the only draperies, thus admitting all the light possible.

Accidents Will Happen

A country minister was driving a spirited horse through a village when he overtook the local doctor and offered him a lift.

Ten minutes later the horse bolted, upset the carriage, and spilled both men. The doctor rose to his feet and felt himself over to see whether he was injured. Then he turned angrily towards the clergyman.

"What do you mean by inviting me to ride behind such an animal?"

"Well," replied the minister, mildly, "it was lucky that this time there were no bones broken. But I always like to have a doctor with me when I drive that horse."

FOXY GRANDPA STORY

HOW HE DECIDED AN ARGUMENT

YES, indeed, some funny animals do live in Australia. You know that is where the kangaroo lives and also the cassowary.

Cassowary? A cassowary, my dear, is a huge bird like an ostrich and is a great runner.

A cassowary has long legs and a long neck with a funny little head perched on top. Oh, yes! He also wears a helmet, a big horny lump on the very top of his head like a soldier's helmet.

One day, when we were in Australia, Bunny, Bobby and I were having an argument as to which could run the faster—a kangaroo or a cassowary.

Finally I said:

"Let's decide it by a race. Bunny, you ride our friend, Mrs. Kangaroo, and Bobby, you ride Mr. Cassowary."

Bobby shouted, "That's fine! Bunny, go and find our friends and see if they agree."

They were agreeable and we made our plans. We measured off the race course and put up a stake at the place where they would finish.

There I took my stand. The two riders climbed on their mounts and rode to the starting point—Bunny on Mrs. Kangaroo and Bobby on Mr. Cassowary.

They had a hard time getting settled, because the big birds' feathers were so slippery that Bobby could hardly keep from sliding off, and Bunny's fur next to Mrs. Kangaroo's fur made him slip around quite a bit before he finally got settled.

I saw them from a distance, scrambling around, trying to get tightly seated. They had agreed to start when I dropped a flag which I held in my hand.

Both riders were secure now. Both steeds were swaying and stamping in their desire to get away.

I dropped my flag and off they flew!

What a race it was! I can see them now. Mr. Cassowary, running with great strides and there by his side, bouncing along in huge hops, Mrs. Kangaroo.

They were neck and neck—side by side.

They went so fast I could hardly see what happened.

Then suddenly I saw a white streak flying through the air. Mrs. Kangaroo stopped and I thought.

"What's this? Is the race off?"

But no, almost at once she was off again and soon caught up with the cassowary.

They came closer, and I saw Bobby's hair standing straight up. But he was leaning forward just like a jockey and his head was close to the big bird's neck.

But I couldn't see Bunny. Where was he? Had Bunny fallen off? Was Mrs. Kangaroo running the race without her jockey?

She was getting a lead on Mr. Cassowary and up she hopped toward the finishing line, all alone I thought.

Up she came—faster—faster. Mr. Cassowary was on her heels.

How exciting—but I was disappointed that Bunny had been forced to drop off or out.

Just then, Bunny did drop out! Right before my eyes he scrambled up on Mrs. Kangaroo's back and sat there laughing as Bobby and Mrs. Cassowary came across the line a moment too late.

Where did he drop from? Right out of the pouch Mrs. Kangaroo has to carry her babies in. When Bunny had fallen off, that's where Mrs. Kangaroo had put him.

"You win," Bobby and I cried together.

VOGUE FOR INITIALS

By Rita Stuyvesant

INITIALS stamped on frocks, suits and blouses are everywhere seen and much ingenuity is displayed in placing them.

On a stunning sports frock of white crepe silk an oval neck was collared in flame red crepe, and the long peasant sleeves were also cuffed in the flame crepe. Across the front, and a little to the left, a double initial was embroidered in bright red silk, enclosed in a circle.

The same suggestion for a sports frock might be developed in a number of interesting combinations. For instance, crepe in a lovely chartreuse could be trimmed and embroidered in porcelain blue silk or wool, or one might favor the black and white combinations.

A slip-on blouse, for tennis or golf, is of cream wool jersey, initialed on the sleeve in the new Lanvin green. It is made like a middy blouse and shows pipings of green on the collar and cuffs, and is finished with a green silk tie. Again one might choose numerous combinations for a blouse of this type, and a blouse from last season could be given a new lease of life if it were initialed.

Not only do we find the initials appearing on the frocks and blouses, but also on the bathing suits as well. The one-piece knitted suits are made more interesting and personal by a single or double initial. These are done in script or old English lettering, and sometimes the letters overlap.

If you want to lend a personal note to your boy's sports shirt of silk or madras, why not put his initials on the sleeve or pocket?

Peeling Off the Years From the Aging Face

With Ordinary Mercolized Wax

It should be possible for a woman of 45 to make herself look not a day over 25. Almost any woman of 30 can look 20. Modern science has achieved in ordinary Mercolized Wax a medium that accomplishes the seemingly impossible. Just as a withering rose can be made to look young and beautiful again by peeling off the faded outer petals, so the face will retain its youthful appearance if the dead cuticle is removed as fast as it appears, allowing the new fresh skin underneath to develop like a bud breaking into flower. And that is what Mercolized Wax actually does—peels off the aging surface skin—gently, gradually, harmlessly. If you've never tried this remarkable substance, get an ounce from your druggist, use like cold cream at night, washing it off mornings—and watch the years peel off.

FORCE OF GRAVITY

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest

"I shall be greatly obliged if you will enlighten me on the following point: In Salisbury's 'Modern Geography' it says that a body weighs slightly more at high latitudes because the earth being flattened at the poles, these objects are nearer to the centre of the earth. Is that right on the contention that the force of gravity is zero at the earth's centre?—C. F. W., Chicago."

THE statement that you quote about the increase of weight with approach to the poles is not only correct, but also consistent with the fact that the force of gravity becomes zero at the earth's centre. To see this you have only to consider that the force of gravity acting upon a body increases with approach to the centre only when the body is upon, or outside of, the earth's crust. Below the surface gravity decreases with depth, because inside the globe only so much of the mass attracts toward the centre as lies at a greater depth than that of the object, or particle, attracted.

This is shown by a famous demonstration in Newton's "Principia." If you were inside a spherical shell of homogeneous matter, taking the place of the earth, you would have no tendency to fall or move in any direction, no matter at what point inside the shell you might be, for the gravitative force would be balanced at every poi Now, the law is the same insi the solid earth.

All the earth-mass that is above the level of the object attracted ceases to draw the object toward the centre, only the spherical mass below acting in that direction. Arrived at the centre, the object would be subjected to no prevailing force in any direction, all the lines of attraction there neutralizing one another's effect.

As a matter of fact, the law of decrease of weight with approach to the centre does not begin to manifest itself in the case of the earth until after a certain distance below the surface has been attained, the reason for this being that the density of the earth increases toward the centre, the exterior shell having only relatively small density, so that, down a certain depth, calculated at approximately 600 miles, gravi slightly diminishes to zero at the centre.

Now, you will see that this law has no application to bodies resting on the earth's surface because even when that surface is relatively nearer the centre, as at the poles there is no part of the earth mass whose attraction does not have a downward component in the direction of the centre.

Screen Version Novelized

BILL PECK belonged to the great army of those patriotic young men who answered the call of their country and went overseas to insure the triumph of democracy for the world in general.

Like many of his fellows Bill was wounded and sent back home to a hospital where he had two long years to think things over while the European nations squabbled and haggled and needed only the money and the men they had all sacrificed to begin all over again.

Before the catastrophe Bill had been a lumber salesman and he was looking forward to the day when he could walk out of the hospital a free man again on two good legs or as good as the surgeons could make them and resume his place in the world of business.

Napoleon's axiom on waiting applies to rich and poor, little and great; it applied to Bill; he kept to himself the joy he felt when he was told that he was dismissed as cured; he kept it to himself because he shared quarters with a man who would never receive that wonderful word.

Sandy's suffering always seemed to lighten things for Bill, and Sandy's patience always set him an example. It was inspiring to see him take his fate so calmly lying there with his legs in a sling and his back broken beyond mending.

Bill was at a loss exactly how to say good-bye to Sandy; he was fond of him and he didn't want to hurt his feelings. But there was no disguising the look on his own face and Sandy was a past master at reading expressions.

Long before Bill began to pack his bag Sandy asked him point blank if he'd got a job.

"A job," stammered Bill, looking up, "me a job?"

"It's all right, old fellow," said Sandy. "I know you're going and I'm glad for you and I wish you all the luck in the world."

"Yes, I'm going, Sandy—and I haven't got a job, but I've had some cards printed. I'm going with the Ricks Lumber Company as soon as I get out."

He pulled from his coat a card neatly engraved with the name of the firm in question and his own in modest letters beneath it.

Sandy smiled as he looked. "How do you know you'll be able to land there?" he asked.

"Sure I will—I've got to—why, I sold lumber before the war and I guess I can sell it now."

Wished He Was Going

Sandy's eyes said he wished he was going with him, but he only nodded. "You're all right, Bill—I bet you do land a place there."

"Don't you think I won't be coming back to see you, Sandy—you bet I will—and you'll be out one of these days—sure you will."

He bent over his bag wondering how he was going to get into it all the stuff he wanted to take away.

And all the while he was talking at Sandy. "Look at me, old boy, I was all shot up and the doctors fixed me up so I can walk with scarcely a limp—it'll be the same with you."

There was a knock at the door and Bill's old pal, Jack Evans, thrust in a grinning head:

"Hello, Jack!" cried Bill, "come along in; it's all right—what's brought you here?"

"Heard you was coming out today and I came to offer you a job—I'm over on the Aviation Field, you know—can't keep away from the old buses."

"Mighty square of you Jack, said Bill, rising to shake his hand, "but the fact is I'm going to work at my own business," and he showed the card he had displayed to Sandy.

It wasn't any wonder that Mr. Evans evinced the same curiosity about his friend's new position that Sandy had voiced and when Bill explained that he wasn't really engaged yet he burst into a loud laugh.

Bill Peck, the "go-getter," says good-by to his pals in the army hospital

"You've got the nerve all right—oh, wait, till you run up against old Skinner."

"That's nothing to me, boy."

"Well, you'll be getting away from your troubles."

"Sure I'll be leaving the hospital and all the good pals."

"And all the rotten doctors," said Jack.

"And all the doctors," said Bill, "though some of 'em are pretty good." He really meant it, so when the surgeon on duty walked into the room in time to catch this fleeting praise his advent was not such an evil circumstance as it might have been.

As a matter of fact, he had come with Bill's discharge papers, and no prisoner could have been more elated. He had a clean bill of health now and he proposed to waste no time in getting out.

Jack went around with him as he said his farewells to the men he had come to know, but Bill did not get much encouragement from most of them; the world was a hard place, they told him, and the greatest aftermath industry of the great war was forgetfulness.

"You'll be back here in a week," said Jeff Phillips, who to all outward appearances was well able to support himself.

"You'll find the fellows that made the money out of us guys ain't goin' to give you no chance," said Charley Twining, who was suffering from shell shock. I've tried it and know."

Bill could not believe that the millions who so loudly proclaimed the men who marched to the war would show anything but favor to them now that the war had been won. Everybody had been very attentive in the hospital and why should they act differently outside?

His parting with Sandy was a solemn affair. After the fashion of men they could only shake hands, but Sandy had a surprise for Bill. It was an old wallet and it was stuffed full of bills.

"Here, Bill," his voice was a little shaky, "you take this, you'll need it, and I'll never have any use for it."

"Bless your heart," said Bill, fishing in his pocket and swiftly folding up a handkerchief and covering the top with a dollar bill, "look at the wad I've got—if it wasn't for that I'd take it, Sandy—you understand, don't you?"

The sick man thrust the wallet back, "It's all right, Bill."

Twisted Smile

And there was a twisted smile on his face when the other went out of the room. There was plenty for the nurses to do with so many patients so no one, not even a nurse, saw the tears that coursed down Sandy's cheeks after the door had shut on Bill Peck and his friend.

It's a great feeling to be out in the world again after one has been shut away from it. Bill Peck had a healthy desire to be at work: no one could say the years he had lost had been wasted, but he had done nothing to increase his own efficiency in the lumber business and he had been able to lay up no money for a rainy day.

He was a little skeptical about the value of being an ex-soldier, from what his late companions had told him. Jack was a little more optimistic. "You come along with me and I'll land you a berth at the Field."

Mr. Peck tapped his pocket and shook his head. "No Jack, every man to his trade. I'm going to hire a small room and leave my bag and then me for the water front and Ricks."

"You always were a stubborn cuss," said Jack. "I'm going to see you settled and then I'm going to leave you."

"You know darn well I don't know much about machinery," said Bill, "and I'd be a fifth wheel out there with all you experts."

Read This Live Americ[illegible] This Page Day by Day, Then [illegible] It in Motion Pictures

"Expert mechanics my eye," snorted Jack.

"Well, anyway, me for a lumber job."

Jack saw him to the room and walked to the street again with him. "Phone me when you need me," he said gaily, "and after Skinner gets through with you I expect to be hearing from you pretty quick."

The Ricks logging and lumber company and the Ricks steamship lines were known to everyone on the Pacific Coast. Cappy Ricks himself stood as the embodiment of business shrewdness tempered with the milk of human kindness.

Mr. Ricks, on the particular afternoon selected by Bill Peck to ask for a job, was discussing a matter very close to his heart with an old pal, Mr. Hugh McNair, also an expert in lumber and transportation.

Cappy liked to play golf with McNair, and McNair was now trying to play horse with Cappy. He had secured control of a steamship line to China and the news had caused Cappy to give voice to some choice expressions worthy of the golf links.

Nothing for Him

"There's one thing sure," he said to him, "and that is, I'm going to see to it that you don't get a stick of any of my stuff to take in your ships. Write that down and remember it."

"Bet you I will, Cappy."

"No, sir, you won't—what do you mean pretending to be a friend of mine and going and buying a steamship line—a competing line?"

"There's lots of room for another line," Mr. McNair argued, rather amused at Cappy's evident anger.

Mr. Ricks puffed a bad cigar with furious haste; he blew large clouds of smoke here, there and everywhere; he got up from his comfortable chair and paraded around the room, and all the while McNair watched him much as a small boy might watch an act on the vaudeville stage.

"No golf today, sir," snapped Cappy Ricks.

"You're afraid I'll beat you," laughed McNair.

"What's that?" yelled Cappy, "by the pink toed prophet—you beat me? No, sir—that's all, sir—this is my busy day," and he threw himself into his chair and began to make marks on a pad with the nervous activity of a man who had only a few hours to live.

"See you tomorrow, [illegible] Cappy," said McNair.

"No, you won't," Cappy shouted, but the door had closed.

While Cappy Ricks was walking about his room puffing furiously on his cigar and trying to devise ways and means to get even with his old friend McNair, Lorenso Skinner, his general manager, was looking over some lumber statements which did not seem to afford him particular pleasure.

The fact was that Mr. Skinner had been caught napping. He had let the firm in for a purchase of a vast quantity of skunk spruce for which there was no immediate market and the consignment looked like a dead loss.

Mr. Skinner was quite a different personality from the head of the concern. Cappy was slight. Mr. Skinner was heavy. Cappy had plenty of white hair. Skinner was almost bald. Cappy was genial. Skinner was a bear. Cappy smiled most of the time. Skinner growled all the time.

The two men were as different as the skunk spruce was different from mahogany. All the employes in the vast Ricks enterprises loved Cappy; there was something human about him, but not one of them saw in Skinner anything but a hard business machine. And every one of them wondered how in the world such a man could have come to be the father of a daughter like Mary Skinner, who was as sweet and companionable as a day in June.

The skunk spruce was a thorn in the business side of Mr. Skinner; he had had it on his mind all day and when he entered his office late in the afternoon after a strenuous conference he was not as pleased as he might have been to find Mary waiting for him.

LOSING YOUR TEMPER

THE MAN WHO FLIES INTO A RAGE

By Beatrice Fairfax

Who Occupies a Unique Position in the Writing World as an Authority on the Problems of Girls.

GORDON has an ungovernable temper. He confesses it himself. It discourages him so that he is just about ready to give up. It costs him friends, positions, peace of mind and faith in himself. He doesn't know when he is going to fly into a rage. He says he is the most miserable man in the world and doesn't know how he is going to bear his cross.

"I can't trust myself," he says. "I don't know when I'm going to fly off the handle. I can't be sure at what moment I'm going to see red. Why, suppose in one of those blind rages of mine I did something irrevocable. I tell you I just about can't live with this thing hanging over my head. My temper is ungovernable—that is the only word for it."

No one who calls his temper "ungovernable" wants to confess that he is set against reason, or that he wills to do the wrong thing.

To govern means to rule over something by law, to control by authority. An authority is the right to command and enforce obedience.

The man with an ungovernable temper isn't a potential lawbreaker. He needn't sit around dreading what he may do some day. He has to deal with what he is doing right now—and that is disregarding law.

Every man has the right to command himself. Every man has the ability to enforce obedience in his own nature. A temper is a rebel in the camp of self. And is that rebel to be permitted a reign of misrule?

When a man says he has a bad temper—he means that he is permitting a lawlessness to possess him.

Anyone who wants to be happy must have his nature in harmony with the laws of life. Temper is discord. You wouldn't be in deliberate discord with an orchestra in which you played an instrument, would you? You wouldn't say you couldn't govern your trombone or your flute, would you? You wouldn't confess that you were playing an instrument you couldn't control. You would feel that you had a right to authority over the violin or the cello you were making it your lifework to play.

But the first instrument you have to learn to play is yourself. And you can pick up something entirely outside yourself and learn to control it.

The minute you say your temper is "ungovernable" you give it authority it cannot get anywhere in the world except from you. You put your head under the heel of a tryant. You give in to the misrule of something that is only a phantom of your imagination.

All you have to do is start out to believe that you can control anything you don't let get the upper hand. Then you have to see the unreasonableness of letting anything excite you to the point where you don't reason. And pretty soon you'll know that your temper is subject to law and government and that it is your right to exercise them.

DAILY HOROSCOPE

Mary Blake Says:

Today lucky if you are CAUTIOUS

THE moon enters Taurus today, a fixed, earthly, semi-fruitful, feminine sign, ruled by Venus. This is a fairly good day for ordinary efforts, and attention should be paid to regular duties. This is not a good day for important affairs and caution should be obseved in regard to accidents.

A person born today will be ambitious and restless in disposition, and will rise rapidly in life.

If today is your birthday you should have great creative powers, combined with some artistic genius. You, if the rule proves true, should rise to unbelievable heights in your profession, sometimes by force of your own merit when coupled with your natural ambition, sometimes by the influence of people attracted to you by your magnetic powers.

This popular saying is from the play "Love's Cure" by Beaumont and Fletcher.

"A chip of the old block."

Was first used in referring to a son who inherited his father's ability by Edmund Burke in congratulating the younger Pitt on his first speech in Parliament, February 26, 1781.

"Let the world wag."

Was an old way of saying "I should worry." Found in Heywood's "Proverbs."

ETIQUETTE POINTERS

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you tell me if I should knock on the door to enter a classroom, with the door closed, or walk right in? UNDECIDED.

IT is better form to knock before entering a classroom. The instructor is "hostess" in a classroom, and it is therefore more courteous to signify your wish to enter.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Influenza, Grippe and Pneumonia usually start with a cold. The moment you get these warning aches, get busy with good old Musterole. Musterole is a counter-irritant that relieves congestion (which is what a cold really is) and stimulates circulation.

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

New York Stock Market Softens After Showing Strength Led by Steels

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

This is being written on a train heading for Florida, where I promised, in an unguarded moment, to address the annual convention of the Florida Bankers' Association.

My mind naturally has turned to the subject of bankers, past and present, their place in the scheme of things, and, more particularly, how they are regarded by the general public.

• • •

Bluntly, bankers have been falling in the estimation of the common run of people, particularly, bankers in the larger cities.

• • •

And for this, as for everything else, there are reasons.

What are they?

• • •

The chief, perhaps, is that too many of our city bankers have become so eager to get rich that they have taken to speculative and other covered-up exploits.

Another is that bankers, especially those of certain cities, have figured in a lamentable number of domestic scandals. New York's record in this respect is so disgraceful that it is exciting criticism and condemnation all over the country.

• • •

Then, hardly a week passes without bringing newspaper headlines announcing the closing of some bank because of embezzlement of its funds by a high official.

• • •

In industrial circles complaints have been extremely rife during the last two years that "bankers squeezed the life-blood" out of this and the next company that was overtaken by financial misfortune when the war boom burst. W. C. Durant contemplated capitalizing this species of discontent in his fight against "Wall Street bankers," "by exposing" the outs and ins of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber reorganization engineered by influential banking interests.

• • •

Another charge often brought against big-city bankers is that they will not help to finance any new project, no matter how meritorious, unless they can either boss it completely or pocket a fat rake-off.

• • •

So many concerns were precipitated into financial trouble when the last boom collapsed that it was natural—even though unjust in many cases—to raise the cry that "the banking interests" wilfully forced deflation too far.

• • •

More tales have been bandied mouth to mouth during recent years than ever before concerning "bonuses" paid either directly, or indirectly in order to obtain loans. The term used hasn't always been "bonus"; sometimes it has been "bribery."

• • •

Read this extract from a letter written by a responsible important business man: "I see that you are going to give the Florida Bankers' Association a little dose of good advice. I hope you will get under their skins. I have always had it 'in' for the banker. He is the darndest animal that walks on two legs. I made a talk a few years ago to the Bankers' Association, and I told them that it didn't take very much sense to be a banker, and that two-thirds of the whole gang would come just about as near running a big factory as they would the United States government, and it is the truth. Most of them are a set of numbskulls, who can just sit back and wait for customers to come to them. Put them in a business where they would have to fight for their lives, and —good night! They are ultra-conservative, and conservatism is an aristocratic name for laziness. Read this letter to them when you get down there."

• • •

The answer?

I rub shoulders with so many bankers, who are charming fellows, that I can't swallow all the condemnatory things said about them. But, even so, I can't shut my eyes and ears to the shortcomings the public see in them, or to the deep, fundamental dangers lurking in this widespread distrust and animosity toward "the banking interests."

No magical remedy can be propounded; nothing can be prescribed that isn't as old as the hills.

To cure the evil, so far as this is possible, our erring bankers, many of them carried away by too much prosperity and too much power must simply strive, earnestly and humbly, to get back to mother earth, back to plainer living and more sober thinking, back to less subtle and more straightforward methods, back to the ideal of honest service and cease that conscienceless chase after questionable riches which usually is instigated by fast living, or onerous, ostentatious expenditures.

They may not know it, but as you and I well know, our banking and financial leaders are on trial at the bar of public opinion.

Friday's column discussed the selecting of stocks and made an offer to send the names of several stocks considered an attractive purchase. To do this is against the policy of this newspaper. Therefore, the offer is withdrawn.

HIGHS FOR YEAR IN SEVERAL ISSUES

After several issues had set new 1923 tops amid a display of strength led by the steel group on the New York Stock Exchange, the market softened and became very dull. Money renewed at 4½, then lifted to 6 per cent.

Highs for the year appeared in du Pont, up more than 4 points; General Motors, North American Co., Canadian Pacific and Reynolds Tobacco "B."

In late afternoon trading the steels were mostly off fractions to more than a point, and the oils from fractions to more than 2 points.

Stewart-Warner Speedometer and Western Union at their best were up two or more points.

Buying of enormous amounts of General Motors featured early afternoon dealings. One block of 20,000 shares changed hands at 16, after which the price touched 16¼, the highest of the year.

Ann Arbor preferred led the early advance in rails with a gain of 1⅜. St. Paul preferred advanced a point, Canadian Pacific ¾ and Illinois Central, Norfolk & Western and Wabash A ½ each.

Gains of 1 to 1½ were recorded by Air Reduction, Utah Securities, Kayser Silk, U. S. Realty and Reynolds Spring. Pan American A and B were the outstanding weak spots, dropping 2 points each.

Price changes in bond dealings were decidedly mixed. Foreign bonds showed little or no change, and the U. S. government securities moved irregularly.

Wall St. Gossip

PRESIDENT Byram denies any one is negotiating for purchase of St. Paul Railway.

ATLANTIC Refining for 1922, including sub companies, report net profit of $7,075,662 after tax and charges, against net loss of $3,740,261 in 1921.

ILLINOIS Central for 1922 shows net of $16,089,676, after taxes and charges, against $9,700,734 in 1921.

ROOT & Vandervoort Corporation for 1922, including subsidiaries reports a deficit of $642,811 after expenses and charges, against $1,155,266 in 1921.

SAPULPA Refining production in Burbank extension has increased to 3,269 barrels a day.

GULF States Steel earnings for first quarter are understood to have been $533,978, equal, after preferred dividends, to $4.44 a share, or at annual rate of $17.76.

WALDORF earnings for first quarter of year were in excess of $300,000, or at the annual rate, after preferred dividends, of approximately $5 a share on common stock.

MACK Truck dividend rate increase is expected, but those who should be in the know say it will come late in the year.

PENNSYLVANIA'S importance among carriers is best appreciated when it is known the road's freight business is normally about 11 per cent. of the national total and its passenger business 17 per cent.

LOUISVILLE & Nashville earnings would have justified a continuance of old $7 dividend instead of the $5 dividend declared, but conservative management decided on smaller rate for the new stock.

PITTSBURGH Coal's report shows total holdings 164,351 acres owned in fee simple and 634 acres leased. Of its owned acreage 154,176 acres are located in the Pittsburgh coal district.

NEWPORT, R. I., will receive proposals until 5 p. m., April 19, for discount of a temporary revenue loan of $100,000, dated April 25 and maturing September 4, 1923.

CUBA Cane is selling its sugar this year as produced, following the policy which last year resulted in its marketing a large part of its product under cost. This year, however, prices average a good deal higher.

MANY tanners consider leather has not shared in recovery with other industries, and that there is still room for much improvement.

UNITED Fruit's sugar work is being somewhat hampered by shortage of cane cutters.

PRESIDENT C. S. SMITH of Arizona Commercial says: "Taxes and transportation costs are excessive and not yet adapted to present conditions of the industry."

WICKWIRE Spencer's earnings for first two months of this year were at rate of more than $2.30 a share on the 434,000 shares of outstanding common.

NEW Haven-controlled Ontario & Western will not consider dividend resumption before Autumn, and probably not at that time.

COPPER BUYING IS IN QUIET PERIOD

There is a temporary lull in copper buying and some sellers have become anxious to dispose of a fair tonnage for shipment over the next two or three months down to 17 cents for electrolytic.

A few nervous holders can readily change the trend of the copper market in a quiet period, but it is well to consider that the big manufacturing concerns are deluged with business. Brass mills anticipate a heavy demand for their products during the next six months, which will far surpass that of the corresponding months of last year.

There has been an increased volume of refined output, coincident with expanding consumption, and that fact has been a factor to keep the market within reasonable limits. Never before have the leading brass and copper plants of the country consumed so much copper.

Manufacturing activity is large in volume everywhere, and substantial new requirements are expected to develop in the near future.

Bright Spots in Shadowland

PICTURE fans will see the versatile Lionel Barrymore in a new light in the new Cosmopolitan Productions' special, "Enemies of Women." The unfortunate crook, "Boomerang Bill," and the crafty "Boston Blackie" are replaced by Prince Libimoff, a man who has lived too fully and one who believes that everything has a price but that nothing is worth what it costs. In his new picture Barrymore will lead a strenuous life, too. He indulges in two big fights, one with Ivan Linow, a Russian wrestler, the other a duel with Paul Panzer, who slashes a wicked sword.

LOUISE AT REST.

LOUISE FAZENDA has finished her work in "Cold Chills" and is now recuperating from the strenuous comedy action by playing a comedy part for Warner Brothers' production. Louise needs a rest, for "Cold Chills" certainly placed a strain on her ability and talent. She was cast as a Swedish immigrant maid, and did some acrobatic work over the side of a ship which was both strenuous and hazardous. Then she was nursemaid in a household containing five vigorous children, one of whom insisted on wearing Mexican spurs when Louise played horse for them. Then she took a few falls down stairs and other stunts usually performed only by male comedians, and as a consequence she regards the temporary engagement with the Warners as a sort of vacation.

FOUR and one-half miles to location each day. This is what the Tribune-Murfin company is up against in the land of ice and snow, where the only means of travel is skis or dog sleds. The company is now working at Lake Louise, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, where Strongheart's next starring vehicle, "The Phantom Pack," is being made. They are now "shooting" at Lake Louise Glacier and have to travel a mile and a half across the ice of the lake and three miles up the mountain on skis. "Our greatest Winter sport," writes Walter Perry, "is carrying in our own water and coal. We have taken over some Summer cabins and they haven't all 'the comforts of home.'"

COOLIDGE TO SPEAK AT CENTENNIAL

Vice-President Calvin Coolidge, who will make the principal address at the Jonas Chickering Centennial dinner at the Copley-Plaza next Saturday evening, has informed Courtenay Guild, chairman of the Boston committee, that he will speak on "Music as a National Asset."

Mr. Coolidge is a firm believer in the necessity of American art to the continued stability and advancement of the country, and he will tell of the official Washington view on this subject as he has found it.

REPORT BOSTON MONTANA MINE IN GOOD SHAPE

By BERT FORD.

Charles C. Mellen, master in the injunction proceeding brought to restrain the American Discount Corporation from disposing of $3,500,000 bonds of Boston-Montana Corporation, will resume the twice-deferred hearing on Wednesday. Isadore H. Brand, ancillary receiver, of Boston-Montana and subsidiaries, will come from New York to attend the hearing.

"Since Charles S. Muffley of Helena, Mont., and I were appointed receivers," said Mr. Brand, "we have received many inquiries as to the status of the Montana properties and equipment. I found the property in excellent condition on my recent visit. There isn't a finer mill in the country. The mines are said by experts to give promise of a big future if properly operated and managed.

"There are seventy-one claims covering about 3,200 acres, including fine timber tracts. While copper ore predominates there is some gold, silver, lead and zinc.

ELKHORN GROUP.

"There is the Elkhorn group of mines, the French Gulch group and the Montana Southern Railroad. These are three distinct undertakings and the railroad is a necessary adjunct to profitable operation of the mines. R. M. Attwater, Jr., one of the keenest experts in the country, was sent by a firm of international bankers to survey the Boston-Montana holdings. His tour of inspection lasted from September 22 to October 1, 1922.

He reported that to date all work had been confined to the Elkhorn Mines and the railroad connecting it to the main line of the Southern Pacific Railway. He said work on the French Gulch properties awaited a further extension of the Montana-Southern Railroad of about twelve miles.

RAILROAD EXTENDED.

"Mr. Attwater reported that extension of the standard gauge line twelve miles to Ralston would not only open up the French Gulch group but would accelerate traffic in and out of Big Hole Valley. This valley is eighty miles long and from ten to twelve yards wide. It is an old lake bed with fertile soil, fenced by mountain ranges and watered by Big Hole River. The altitude is more than 6,000 feet, according to Mr. Attwater's findings, and the valley is famous as a cattle fattening ground.

BRITISH DEBT CUT HALF A BILLION

London, April 16 (By the Associated Press).—Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer, making his budget statement before a crowded chamber in the House of Commons today, said the past year's surplus of £101,000,000, about $500,000,000, had gone to reduction of the debt. The financial year just closed had become steadily better as it proceeded, trade at home and abroad had improved, and unemployment had diminished considerably he said.

Our Workers Are Good and Efficient

And Our Grafters and Monopolists Are Most WONDERFULLY Efficient

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

We call your attention to facts strongly put in a short editorial published by LABOR, a newspaper published in Washington, D. C., managed by Edward Keating, and extremely WELL MANAGED in the interest of its working readers.

The editorial deals with the kind of workers we produce in the United States—the best and most efficient in the world, and with the kind of exploiters that we produce here, also by many hundred per cent., ABSOLUTELY the most efficient in the world.

As you read this short editorial, giving FACTS, bear in mind what Goethals, the great engineer of the Panama Canal, said when he gave up his work on the committee supposed to represent and protect the people in the coal crisis.

What he said bluntly was that committees are of no use, because the government itself doesn't protect the people. Congress does nothing for them, gives no one power to look after them. In the coal crisis the exploiting owners of the coal mines and the inefficiently managed railroads ruled the situation.

Read this editorial, of which the apt heading is:

"PASTE THIS IN YOUR HAT."

We are half frozen by coal grafters in Winter. But the Spring sunshine comes and with it the important task of choosing a new hat for Spring, and the past and its graft, its coal and cold, are forgotten. Here is the editorial:

"PASTE THIS IN YOUR HAT"

From "Labor"

Facts are powerful weapons when used by intelligent men and women. Here are a few which it would be well to remember:

A report just issued by the United States Bureau of Mines shows that the American coal miner digs three times as much coal as his British brother, and John Bull is some coal digger! But—here is the unpleasant side—in proportion to output, twice as many workers are killed in American mines as in British, and three times as many are injured.

What becomes of the "open shoppers'" claim that American labor is "slowing up"?

An investigation shows that the average earnings of the coal miners in the Cumberland, Md., district for the last ten years have been $723 a year.

Don't forget that when your coal dealer tells you he must charge you $16 a ton for a poor quality of coal "because miners' wages are so high."

The people of New England, New York and other parts of the North and West cannot get enough coal to keep them warm.

WHY?

"To be frank about it," said Congressman Winslow of Massachusetts, ardent defender of the railroads in the House, "there is plenty of coal IF THE RAILROADS HAD THE MOTIVE POWER TO MOVE IT."

That means that the people must freeze while the roads endeavor to smash labor unions. The New England roads have all the motive power they need, but the strikebreakers they have employed can't keep the engines in repair and the roads will not make terms with the experienced union shopmen.

Do you wonder that sentiment in favor of public ownership of the railroads and coal mines is growing in the "conservative" East?

The Far West Our Market

New England Commerce, Through Panama Canal, Not Wholly Dependent on the Railroads

James J. Storrow, who is at the head of the commission studying our New England railroad problem, told the Chamber of Commerce the other day that the development of New England commerce did not depend, in his judgment, entirely upon our railroad connections.

He declared that his study of our transportation situation led him to conclude that our natural market was not the Middle West or the Mississippi Valley, but the far West, the Pacific coast and the Pacific countries beyond, which we could reach through the Panama Canal. He told us that we could transport goods from Boston to San Francisco by water in fourteen days, which is about the time it takes to transport the same goods from Boston to San Francisco by rail; AND AT ABOUT HALF THE PRICE.

This fact leads Mr. Storrow to conclude that the Pacific coast is New England's market rather than the inland region, for the cost of transporting goods even from the interior region to the Pacific coast is greater than transportation by water of goods from New England to ports on the Pacific.

This fact, while perhaps not enlightening to those who have studied our transportation problem, is very enlightening to most of us. It reveals the reason why the railroads fought so desperately and so long and so successfully against the building of the Panama Canal.

A freed, self-governing, rejuvenated India is New England's El Dorado.

The Panama Canal is the greatest engineering achievement of the century. Every private undertaking to build it failed. It was only the American government which succeeded. It is the greatest monument to Roosevelt's fame. If he had done nothing else for his country and only claimed that alone it would mark him out and distinguish him as few are distinguished.

General Goethals, the builder of the canal, has recently publicly said that in a very short time, so great is the traffic, we shall have to build another canal, even after increasing the capacity of the present canal, by increasing the number and size of the locks.

Canalization of the country, increasing its waterways, was a great scheme which Thomas Jefferson and those men of vision in the early days of the republic conceived and handed down to their immediate successors. The country was being threaded with canals when railroads came. The people stupidly permitted the railroads to become private enterprises, so the competitive canals were soon destroyed and America lost the immense benefit of cheap transportation of the crude raw materials by the canal system in order that the stock-watering, grafting, inefficient, private, banker-managed railroads might earn dividends on water.

It took the courage of a Roosevelt to defy the railroads and begin the construction of the Panama Canal, which ought to have been built a generation before.

BIG NAMES AGAINST LICENSE

SHORE, Eng., April 16.—This town claims distinguished nomenclature, if nothing else. The Licensing Commission was sitting.

"My name is Hyman Trotsky, and I desire an off-beer license," said an applicant.

"I oppose on behalf of the 'Vicar of Wakefield'—I mean the 'Vicar of Wakefield public house, with a bottle and jug department," interposed another person.

"I also oppose for 'King Harry,'" came another voice. 'And I for the 'Young Prince.'"

Trotsky didn't get the license.

Owning Own Home

Editor Boston American:

You are doing the best kind of publicity in advising people to own their own home.

There are thousands of renters who could have become capitalists instead of complaining always against their landlords. Few persons have ever accumulated money, especially those with families, unless they owned their own home. Thousands in their old age have become dependent on others, because when in their prime they did not have the thrifty mind which leads one first to save until they own their own home.

Owning one's home is an incentive to the advancement of one's classification in society, and to the holding together of the family. If you have not provided a real home for your children you cannot expect much consideration from them in your old age.

After a man buys a home you will notice how he becomes interested in the upkeep of his locality, the local, State and Federal governments.

The already high and still advancing wages of all artisans used in construction and the material pertaining to a house has not as yet been fully felt by renters—when only newly built houses can be rented the comparison with old rents will be a shock to many.

MAN SPINS A MORE WONDERFUL WEB THAN SPIDER

By Herbert Kaufman

SEEING and believing have dissolved partnership.

Substance becomes finer than the eye. Tungsten has been spun into a wire too small for human vision. Man is at last more cunning than the spider.

Here are invisible filaments, strong enough to hold up a pair of desk shears, and for the carriage of electric currents.

Pandora's box was filled with imagination. Possibility is only halted by necessary translating tools. Every mechanical advance increases the area of achievement. Each discovery is a hub from which countless spokes may radiate. The best way to do nothing is in sight.

Intercommunication is in its infant days—and still speaks with a baby voice. Radio and telephone merely coo in the cradle of experiment. They haven't really learned to talk yet.

Meat on Every Abandoned Bone of Knowledge

James Watt, studying a teakettle steam, saw engines and locomotives in the mist. Lee de Forest looked into a gas flame and beheld an audion tube.

The other day he went back to take a second squint and found he'd overlooked a microphonic device to replace the bothersome diaphragm. Now fire itself speaks. No one mind ever exhausts a subject.

There's meat for another generation on every abandoned bone of knowledge, and unsuspected qualities in the bone itself.

Packers used to boast that they never wanted anything until pathology began to cast a speculative eye at animal glands. A million lives went into fertilizer tanks before medicine snooped there. We're simply at the threshold of revelation. Surgery has hardly left the barber shop. Pharmacy is just starting to search the slaughterhouse.

They Picked Up $105.000.000 on the Beach

Henri Fabre, whom Maeterlinck credits with the profoundest mind of his century, declared that the sum total of human knowledge is as one grain of sand on a seashore. There's hopeful picture for you. Take your ambitions to the beach and ponder.

Plenty of things left to do. The Van Sweringen brothers now control five Middle West railroads capitalized at $105,000,000, which shows what can be picked up on the beach. An Ohio village remembers their barefoot, newspaper-selling days. The oldest of the pair is forty-four. Neither Hill nor Harriman had traveled as far at their age.

Handcuffs Not Instruments of Production

So is war making.

Germany pays, and pays, and pays. Ruhr occupation prevents her from keeping industrial contracts. France gets the order for a 220-ton cable-layer originally placed with Teuton shipyards.

The building of several South American vessels is being renegotiated. Japan has turned plans for two large passenger ships over to Clyde firms. Meanwhile Poincare demands reparations in full.

Two million five hundred thousand dollars' worth of dope is burned by the New York police. Merely half a day's supply for local addicts. America pays out hundreds of millions annually to narcotic pedlars. Figure what bribes and protection money the traffic can afford to pay out of such profits.

The real cost of cocaine, heroin and morphine, however, must be expressed in human values. There's the incalculable loss.

Little furnace fires in Centre street won't halt the narcotic evil.

A Strange Sound to Volsteaded Ears

Parliament invites labor to step to the bar and have a seventy million dollar drink on John Bull.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer proposes that Britain should stand treat to the extent of a penny on every mug of ale. "Subsidized breweries" has an incredible sound to Volsteaded ears.

The House of Commons considers heavy taxes on betting. Race horses should run for the government as well as the bookmakers. Churchmen protest, claiming that such a course would officially condone gambling, but say nothing against horse racing.

Paris arrests music house managers for marching undraped choruses through the audience, but continues to permit nude dancers on the stage.

All of which shows how differently men can think on two sides of the same pond.

Blue noses to the contrary, the United States is by all odds the most moral spot on this earth.
